TUFTS MADE DEAL FOR SURRENDER OF BARNEY AT 2 A. M. CONFERENCE

Lloyd George, Come Over Sentimental—Some Times Fliers and Battleships Business Stopped

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1921.

With deference to Lord Northcliffe, who objects, this country would like to see David Lloyd George and hopes he will come here for the disarmament conference.

There were two big men on the English side in the war. One, Northcliffe, who had the courage to tell the truth to his countrymen, although they burned him and his newspapers in effigy because he did tell the truth. The other was Lloyd George, outstanding democratic giant of the century, who had the intelligence to accept and act on the truth. He first found the MONEY for England, then MADE the ammunition, then USED the ammunition and was boss of the whole business. We should like to see him.

Mr. Sydney and a young lady, Miss La Pointe, needed a goat for a vaudeville "turn." The lady arrested the gentleman who used her fifty-five dollars to buy himself a blue serge suit and derby hat instead of buying the goat, to delight audiences with its cries when wheeled on the stage in a baby carriage.

That's one picture of American life. The young lady, when the man was convicted said: "Judge, I don't want to see this boy go to jail for only $55." So the man was set free under suspended sentence. Many a man has gone to jail for stealing less than half as much when his children were hungry. That's another picture of American life. We are a sentimental people—where a vaudeville turn, including a goat, is concerned.

Sixty flying machines after a short attack yesterday morning sank the former German destroyer G-102. Land planes were used to test their value at sea. The experiment shows that half a million dollars' worth of flying machines, with a little practice, might easily destroy a forty million dollar battleship. The moral of that should be plain to anybody—build flying machines, and save on battleships.

B. C. Forbes, able writer on finance and business, addresses a letter to the banks. He reminds them that they would deeply resent it if business men organized a "dun" on banks. He asks how they think business men like the hammering that bankers have been giving them, compelling them to liquidate stocks at any price and pay up with violent suddenness.

One line in Mr. Forbes' articles referring to 400,000 idle freight cars tells you what business conditions are. In one year the country's exports and imports have been cut down three thousand million dollars. We have stopped doing business with the outside world, and that is no joke.

It is pathetic to hear Mr. Wellington Koo urging that his 400,000,000 Chinese countrymen should have a seat in the disarmament contest. China, of course, will be represented. But numbers mean little. In the forest, at a disarmament conference, one wolf and one fox would be more important than 400,000,000 geese and rabbits. That is why England makes a treaty with Japan and doesn't bother with China—except to get coal and railroad concessions.

Princess Fatima, here from Afghanistan with a valuable jewel in her nose, is angered because Prince Mohammed, with other long names, also from Afghanistan, doesn't call on her, and says he doesn't know anything about her. Princess Fatima wants Mohammed to understand that her family tree goes back to Alexander the Great, and through him farther back. It is generally understood that Alexander's family was wiped out, thanks to female jealousy and misfortune. But strange things may have happened in those early days.

More interesting to America than the Fatima lady's genealogy is the handsome sapphire fastened to a hole in the side of her nose. That would fill with disdain many of our Fatimas that would gladly wear a sapphire in a hole in each ear.

Once more the Orangemen in Belfast have celebrated the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne. And once more, presumably, the Irishmen of the south have recalled the fact that at Boyne Water the Irish lost because they were led by an English King, and the English won because they were led by a Dutchman, whose name the Orangemen still bear.

CROWDS PRAY IN STREET

Irish President and British Premier Shake Hands Cordially at Opening of Conference

By International News Service.

London, July 14.—The preliminary Irish peace parley between Eamon de Valera, President of the Irish Republic, and Premier Lloyd George was formally inaugurated at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon in the historic official residence of the British Prime Minister at No. 10 Downing street.

Premier Lloyd George and DeValera cordially shook hands when they met. As the two entered the cabinet room, where the British ministers meet to discuss questions of state, crowds knelt on the pavement of Downing street and recited the Rosary. Prayers were uttered for an early peace.

DeValera was accompanied to Downing street by Art O'Brien, so-called Sinn Fein ambassador to London, and R. C. Barton, a Sinn Fein member of Parliament.

As the peace conversations were getting under way word came from Belfast of fresh disorders, and it was apparent that neither the Unionists nor the Sinn Feiners in the Ulster city were going to observe the armistice to the strict letter.

Before leaving for Downing street, De Valera said he favored public meetings.

"It would be most satisfactory to have open covenants, openly arrived it," declared the "Irish President."

"But I do not know whether this is always possible. I am sure that the present atmosphere is favorable for peace. Both England and Ireland want peace.

"Up to date, the discussions between England and Ireland have been in the nature of a long range bombardment. Now, we are really getting together. I have great hopes for a settlement."

A girl was shot dead at Belfast and two men and a boy were wounded. There was much shooting in the streets of the city during the greater part of the night.

IRISH PICKETS SUSPECT LLOYD GEORGE'S MOTIVE

New York, July 14.—Asserting that the retention in jail of political prisoners in Ireland indicates that his peace negotiations contain some ulterior motive, officials of prominent Celtic societies here sent a cablegram to Lloyd George today. It follows: "American women pickets for the enforcement of America's war aims doubt the sincerity of your peace negotiations while men and women, notably Countess Markiwicz, who helped put Ireland on the map, are in jail."

MOTHER OF "MURDER TRIAL BABE" IS DEAD

Mrs. Flora Ross, mother of the "Sacco-Vanzetti murder trial" baby, died today.

Mrs. Ross was the wife of Joseph Ross, Italian interpreter at the trial who named his son, born a week ago, Joseph Thayer Ross, as a tribute to Judge Webster Thayer. The baby is still living.

Doctor Says Babies Should Talk at Six Months

By International News Service.

Chicago, July 14.—If your six-months-old baby gurgles "Goo-goo" and "Skibooch," when you poke a playful finger at his "Tummy," he is behind the times. He should say:

"Desist, father, such antics annoy me."

Dr. W. B. Swift of Northwestern University's school of speech, believes that all six months old babies should talk plainly. He will open a clinic soon, where mothers may bring their infants for instruction in the art of talking.

Charged with larceny of a trunk containing the trousseau of his bride-to-be, Caesar Matteucci, twenty-seven years old, a Harrison avenue shoemaker, appeared in Municipal Court. According to Nellie F. Noloninelli, Washington street, Roxbury, she was to marry Matteucci on June 10, and had sent the trunk to the Harrison avenue home. Later she asked Matteucci to return it. Matteucci pleaded not guilty and the case was continued.

Major William A. Beach, assistant adjutant, believes the requests will exceed 1,000 in this area in another week. Enlisted men who can show evidence that jobs are waiting for them are being considered first.

STEALS TROUSERS FROM RACK IN HALL

A thief entered the apartments of Archibald H. Spaulding at No. 42 Radcliffe road, Somerville, while the owner was cooling himself on the rear piazza and made off with a pair of trousers, containing a gold watch and $38 in money.

On his return home, Mr. Spaulding had changed his trousers and left the one with his watch and money on a hat rack in the hall.

POLICEMAN ARRESTED AS THIEF

Detectives Claim Valuable Loot Was Found in Home of Patrolman Harris

Patrolman Wilbur F. Harris, a member of the Boston police force for twenty-one years, was arrested inside the storerooms of the Trimount Coat Company at No. 460 Harrison avenue today, charged with breaking and entering and larceny.

The officer was apprehended by agents of the Wolf Secret Service Bureau after he had fired several shots at them, it is claimed.

He was locked up at Station 5 under the guard of two fellow officers and has threatened to commit suicide.

A search of Harris' home, following his arrest, revealed thousands of dollars' worth of loot, including many articles alleged to have been previously stolen from the Trimount Company.

The loot includes, the police claim, suits, overcoats, raincoats, twenty-five yards of gabardine, sixty yards of cotton lining and about $100 worth of electrical goods.

According to officials, the arrest of the patrolman is expected to clear up a number of mysterious breaks in the Harrison avenue warehouse section.

Tha detectives who arrested Harris had been on duty in the Trimount storeroom for several nights following a series of burglaries there.

During the night, according to the detectives, they were aroused by the "jimmying" of a window on the second floor. From a floor above they saw the intruder climbing from an adjoining building over a ladder.

They went downstairs and awaited the thief. As he came through the window they became aware he was attired in the uniform of a patrolman. They questioned him, whereupon it is alleged he dropped to his knees and drawing his refolver fired several shots, all of which went wild. The detectives then opened fire and the patrolman surrendered.

The shooting aroused the night watchman, who telephoned Station Five, and a squad of police headed by Sergeant John J. Hanrahan responded.

The accused patrolman is about fifty years of age and married. He lives in Allston and is attached to the East Dedham street station. His friends claim he has been "acting queerly" lately.

Accompanied by his attorney, Thomas Daley, he later appeared in the Municipal Court. Judge A. H. Cohen heard the case in the lobby, accepted a plea of not guilty and continued the case to July 21.

LADY ASTOR DISCARDS TOQUE IN PARLIAMENT

London, July 14.—For the first time since she entered Parliament more than a year ago Lady Astor discarded her sober toque. She appeared in the House of Commons wearing a sweeping black straw hat, trimmed with marguerites.

Members infer that she intends henceforth to display variety in her head dress in the historic chamber.

CHILDREN PARADE FOR SODA

Present Protests to Governor and Mayor Against Ice Cream and Cone Prices

Children of Boston marched through the streets in the sweltering heat today in protest against the extortionate prices of ice cream and soda.

From Boston Common the children tramped through Beacon, Tremont, Washington and other downtown thoroughfares which were scenes over a century ago of the demonstrations against another kind of profiteering.

At City Hall they presented a memorial against the ice cream "brigands" to Mayor Peters, and at the State House a similar resolution was received from them for Governor Cox by Chairman Eugene C. Hultman of the State Commission on the Necessaries of Life.

MOTHERS WALK ALONGSIDE.

Some of the children were not more than four years old. Their resolute mothers in many cases paced the sidewalks over the entire route of parade, giving words of encouragement to the hot and tired children.

George Martin, 4 years old, No. 252 Hanover street, North End, was photographed with a monster cone of cardboard, white-topped with fluffy cotton-batten. George is two feet high. The cone was four.

Marjorie Donovan, 9, of No. 216 E street, South Boston, dressed in red, white and blue and wearing a liberty cap, carried a banner which said, "Jail for robbers! What about ice cream profiteers?"

Among the many banners of protest carried by the children these were among the most conspicuous:

"Ice cream cones 2 for 5. That's what!"

"'Overhead,' the dealers' cloak for highway robbery."

"Dealers found cost of living high. But they make the kids pay for it."

BAND BIG IN SPIRIT.

"Jesse James is dead. Long live the ice-cream dealers."

"Do they pay the government that war tax? If they do, why are they afraid to show their books?"

"Commission on Necessaries of Life orders reduction. Dealers laugh. What are you going to do about it?"

"Dealers say, 'Drop in sugar and eggs do not affect prices.' What do they use for substitutes?"

"Cones cost two cents. Cost the kiddies seven cents. Who gets the difference?"

A band, small in numbers but big in spirit, marched with the children. Commissioner Curtis sent a police escort. Representative Paul H. Hines and Lieutenant Joseph Hurley, who, like Hines served with distinction in the war, organized and conducted the parade.

The "kiddies" handed the following resolution of protest to Mayor Peters and Chairman Hultman:

TEXT OF PROTEST.

"We are all parading today to bring down the cost of ice cream soda and cones. We need these in the Summer time and our fathers cannot give them to us because the cost is too much.

"Representative Hines tells us the cones should be sold for 3 cents and

Herman L. Barney and His Sweetheart

Marion O'Brien, Who Figured in First Arrest of Slayer.

Mrs. Marion O'Brien, sweetheart of Herman L. Barney, who was arrested at the time of the Deininger murder and held as a witness, through her relations with him. It was to see her that Barney twice broke jail. Barney, in circle, as he looked at time of his arrest in the Spring of 1919.

District Attorney Tufts is accused by Attorney-General Allen of abusing his office in regard to Barney's delivery back to State prison.

STILLMAN AND WIFE FRIENDS IN 1918

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 14.—Counsel for Mrs. Anne Urquhart Stillman expected to fire today what they consider their most telling shot in the divorce suit brought by James A. Stillman against his wife.

Testimony to show that during January, 1918, Stillman was with Mrs. Stillman at Pleasantville, N. Y., and to all appearances "an affectionate husband," will be given by H. Phelps Clawson, Buffalo society man and amateur poet, a friend of both Stillmans. Baby Guy, whose paternity remains the only live issue in the case, was born in November, 1918.

Clawson will testify that he was a guest at "Mondamne," the Stillman's Pleasantville home, on January 1, 6 and 27, 1918.

On two of those dates, he says, the banker remained over night with his wife. A letter written to his mother on January 27, 1918, giving gossip of "Mondamne" and the Stillmans, will substantiate Clawson's statements, Mrs. Stillman's counsel declares.

Mrs. Stillman's attorneys are inclined to stress the significance of these dates. Now that Stillman is not to deny his wife's accusations of infidelity on his part, his counsel is expected to make the paternity of Baby Guy the real issue of the remainder of the trial, and the banker's lawyers are expected to contend that he had no relations with his wife during the year before Guy was born.

DEPORTATION OF 173 IMMIGRANTS ORDERED

One hundred and seventy-three Polish Jews who arrived here on board the Baltic liner Lituania yesterday will be deported at once, according to immigration authorities.

The Polish quota for this post was exceeded early in June for that month, July and part of August, and orders have come from Washington that steamship companies are not to be allowed in future to exceed their quotas.

Approximately twenty-seven of those thus detained may be permitted to come ashore, but the others will be sent back to Danzig.

Under maritime law the steamship company must bear the cost of returning these immigrants.

LAWYER ADMITS SHIELDING GUNMAN

Denies District Attorney Knew Where Slayer Was Until He Actually Gave Himself Up

The detailed story of Herman L. Barney's surrender to District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts of Middlesex County last Summer following his break from the Charlestown State prison was told today at the trial of Tufts by the Supreme Court on charges of malfeasance.

Two witnesses told of the way in which the slayer of Patrolman Deininger was induced to give himself up at Northampton.

First of the two to take the stand was Stephen Bresnahan of North Cambridge, Boston lawyer, an admitted go-between in the negotiations carried on with Tufts in Barney's interest.

Scarcely less important was the testimony of Edward O'Halloran, former inspector in the Newton Police Department.

O'Halloran was the man who accompanied Attorney Tufts to Northampton on the historic trip which resulted in Barney's surrender.

Attorney Bresnahan told without evasion on his part in the return of Barney to custody.

He sheltered Barney in his own home two nights after the jail break, and could have gotten in touch with Barney almost at any time.

Details of the "surrender" were decided on, according to O'Halloran, at a meeting held in Northampton about 2 o'clock in the morning. Tufts was present.

The next night Barney surrendered.

Upon resuming his testimony today, Attorney Bresnahan, close friend of Herman L. Barney, denied that he knew at the time that District Attorney Tufts went to Northampton and negotiated for the return of Barney that Tufts was a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts.

"I knew that he was not," said the witness.

Q.—Did you read that he was? A. —I read that he was not.

URGED TO GIVE BARNEY UP.

Bresnahan testified that he did not receive a telephone communication from Tufts before meeting him and denied having any communication with Tufts. "I knew how Tufts happened to come to Northampton. I knew Tufts was going to meet O'Halloran. But that Tuesday morning, until I saw Tufts, I did not knew he was with O'Halloran.

Witness said that after meeting Tufts and O'Halloran in front of a

BRESNAHAN DESCRIBES HOW BARNEY WAS INDUCED TO SURRENDER

WITNESS DECLARES HE DIDN'T KNOW TUFTS ASPIRED TO BE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR

hotel in Northampton about 4 in the morning. Tuesday, they went to the depot and sat on the depot steps or the steps of the automobile and had a conversation.

Those participating were O'Halloran, Tufts, Barney's stepfather and the witness.

He said they were at the station on two or three occasions. On the first visit they talked about ten minutes. He said that during the first conversation he heard Tufts urge Barney's stepfather to tell where the young fellow was and for him not to wait any longer in giving himself up.

Witness stated the house in which Barney stayed, the home of Joseph Meissi, was on Washington avenue, Northampton.

Attorney Hurlburt showed Bresnahan a map of Northampton. He pointed out the street he (Bresnahan) and Barney had walked on and the places where the three conferences were held with Tufts and O'Halloran by him, during the preliminaries to the surrender.

The feature of Bresnahan's testimony today was his denial that Tufts had gubernatorial aspirations and his refusal to identify as his handwriting the signatures on the record of the Hotel Draper at Greenfield.

His attention was called to two names in the hotel register: "O'Connor and Rogers," initials not given. They registered as from Chicopee.

Q.—Are these names in your handwriting? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Will you say it is not your handwriting A.—I won't say it is or isn't.

Q.—Have you ever admitted that it was your handwriting? A.—No.

Q.—Did you register under your own name? A.—No.

Q.—Why not? A.—Well, after we learned that someone had taken the number of the machine I registered under a different name.

Q.—What machine was that? A.—Inspector O'Halloran had it.

Q.—You know it was a police machine from Newton? A.—I didn't know.

BARNEY TOOK NUMBER

In his opening testimony yesterday Bresnahan stated that while he was talking with Halloran on the street in Northampton he noticed a man step from behind a tree and take the number of the car. He later learned the man was Barney.

Q.—How did you know how to find Barney? A.—In my last talk with him in Cambridge he told me if I ever wanted to get in touch with him to drop a line to the home of Joseph Meissi of Washington place, Northampton.

"When I went with Inspector O'Halloran I knew what street to go to. O'Halloran waited in the road about a half a mile away.

He further testified to a conference he had with O'Halloran and Tufts on a later visit to Northampton, following an interview he had with Barney.

He said he told O'Halloran that if they didn't let him handle the matter in his own way he would wash his hands of the affair. He said he and Barney had stopped at the Hotel Draper in Greenfield and that O'Halloran and Tufts stopped at a hotel in Northampton.

He said one of the conferences was held in front of Smith College in Northampton. Witness admitted that Tufts wanted Barney to return at once, but that Barney told him he wanted first to consult his mother. Tufts agreed to that.

Q.—Did O'Halloran stop at the same hotel with you at Northampton? A.—No.

Q.—After you left Northampton did you, Tufts, O'Halloran and Barney go to Springfield? A.—No.

Q.—Where did you go? A.—To Arlington.

The witness said that Barney's stepfather was "dropped" at his home in Arlington. "I can't say whether I went in with him after getting out of the machine at the same time or whether I went there later," he added.

Q.—Did Tufts go to Barney's stepfather's house in Arlington that day? A.—I don't recall.

Q.—What time did you leave for Arlington? A.—Early in the forenoon, 7 or 8 o'clock.

Q.—What route did you follow? A.—We came through Greenfield, Gardner, Ayer and the Mohawk trail.

Q.—You didn't go through Springfield and Worcester? A.—No.

Q.—When did you return to Northampton? A.—Later that afternoon.

Q.—Was Tufts with you? A.—No, but I saw Tufts on the road behind us; I think as we went through Fitchburg. Then I lost sight of him.

Q.—Had you made any arrangements with Tufts for him to go back to Northampton? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where was the arrangement made? A.—Where we had the conversation in Northampton, either at the roadside or the depot.

Q.—When you left Boston the second time that day where did you drive to? A.—Right along to Greenfield; we had to stop there because of a storm and then we went along to Northampton when the storm let up.

Q.—Who was in the machine when you got to Northampton? A.—Barney's stepfather and his wife, the chauffeur and I.

Q.—What did you do when you got there? A.—Mr. and Mrs. Barney and I went to see the young fellow (Barney).

Q.—Where was Tufts? A.—I think he was in another machine following.

The witness said he thought Tufts drove up to the railroad station about the same time that the car in which he rode stopped there.

Q.—What happened there? A.—O'Halloran, Tufts, Mr. and Mrs. Barney and I sat down in the waiting room and talked. I told Tufts to wait at the railroad station while we went to see the young fellow. I gave him his choice of waiting or going without seeing him. I told him if he did not wait and let us handle the matter ourselves in our own way we would have nothing further to do with Barney surrendering himself. I told him we would handle the matter in our own way or we'd take the next train back to Boston.

ARRIVED AT HOUSE LATE.

Q.—Did you take the next train back to Boston. A.—No.

The witness said this interview at the station took place late in the evening, but he could not say whether it was about midnight.

"When we got to the house it was so late Barney came down in his pajamas."

Q.—You went by Smith College to the house? A.—I cannot place Smith College.

Q.—Well, where did you stay? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Where did the car in which you rode there stop? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Who gave the order to the chauffeur? A.—Mr. Tufts gave orders to the chauffeur.

Q.—Did you talk to Barney A.—Yes.

Q.—How long? A.—Fifteen or twenty minutes, or perhaps a half hour.

Q.—Who was with you? A.—His mother and step-father.

Witness told of his return to Greenfield and of a subsequent visit to Northampton and meeting Tufts and O'Halloran at the railroad station there.

Q.—How long did you say you were talking to Barney? A.—I said from fifteen minutes to a half an hour.

Q.—What did you tell Mr. Tufts and Mr. O'Halloran A.—I told them Barney would surrender in three days.

Q.—What language did Tufts use in answering you? A.—I won't give it to you verbatim, for I don't know.

Q.—So far as you know, were State police in Northampton informed by you, Tufts or O'Halloran as to Barney's whereabouts? A.—I don't know.

CONCEALED WHERE BARNEY WAS

Q.—You know you were trying to conceal Barney's whereabouts? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you conceal the whereabouts of Barney from O'Halloran and Tufts? A.—I did.

Q.—What did you say to O'Halloran about it? A.—I told O'Halloran if he would let me handle it my own way I would turn Barney over to him.

Q.—Did you tell O'Halloran from the time you started for where Barney was that he was in Northampton? A.—I don't know.

Q.—You came back to the railroad station at North Northampton after your interview with Barney? A.—I returned to Northampton.

Q.—What hotel did you go to? A.—It may have been the Hotel Welden.

Witness was shown a slip of paper on which was written "Monday, June 28, 1920."

Q.—I ask you if you registered at this hotel? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Does any fictitious name appear there? A.—I don't know.

Q.—What name did O'Halloran go by? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Did you know him by the name of Patrick Fleming? A.—No.

Q.—Did you know him by the name Patrick or Fleming? A.—I don't know.

Q.—You telephoned, you say, to O'Halloran to come through and see Barney and yourself? (Objection).

DIDN'T KNOW TUFTS' WRITING.

Q.—Did you say anything over the telephone to anybody other than O'Halloran? A.—I telephoned to O'Halloran and he said Tufts was with him. I said "Bring him along."

Q.—Do you know Mr. Tufts' signature? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you ever see Mr. Tufts' signature? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever see Mr. Tufts write his name? A.—No.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Tufts write his signature at any time? A.—No.

Q.—What times did you get to Greenfield? A.—Late at night.

Q.—Did Mr. Tufts or Mr. O'Halloran retire? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Did you have any talk with Mr. Tufts with reference to him knowing anybody in Northampton? A.—I don't recall.

Q.—What did you do when you got to the hotel? A.—I sat in the lobby.

Q.—What did the others do? A.—We sat down in the lobby of the hotel, Mr. Barney, Mrs. Barney, Mr. O'Halloran, Mr. Tufts and myself.

Q.—What time did you leave Greenfield next day? A.—Early.

Q.—How early? A.—I don't know.

Q.—In whose automobile did you leave? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Who was with you? A.—I don't know. Mr. and Mrs. Bareny returned at 4 or 5 a. m. to Boston.

Q.—Did you go with them? A.—I didn't start.

Q.—Who was there? A.—Mr. Tufts, Mr. O'Halloran and myself.

Q.—Where did you go after breakfast? A.—I went to the centre of the town in Northampton.

Q.—Was it to a railroad station. A.—I cannot say whether it was a railroad station or not.

Q.—When you got there what did you do? A.—I left them behind and went up and saw young Barney. I had a talk with Barney and I told him his mother wanted him to come in right away.

Q.—What time did you see Barney? A.—I saw him about nine or ten o'clock.

Witness previously stated that the journey over the road in the machine had caused him some fatigue which necessitated his sleeping on the way. He said he was dozing part of the time.

Q.—Were you asleep that morning? A.—I was dozing.

Q.—Did any of the others go to sleep on the journey? A.—I suppose Inspector O'Halloran did.

WENT TO RENDEZVOUS.

Q.—You went to Northampton somewhere around 9 a. m.? A.—Yes.

Q.—You went to the Meissi house after? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—After your talk what did you do? A.—I left Barney and came back to O'Halloran and Tufts.

Q.—Where did you see them? A.—I don't know where.

Q.—Was it the side of the road, a railroad station or where? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Was it at Meissi House? A.—No.

Q.—What did you say to them? A.—I told Mr. O'Halloran and Mr. Tufts that Barney would see them on a road which runs from Northampton to Brattleboro, Vt.

Q.—Where were you to meet him on that road? A.—On the fork of the road, leading off Elm street.

Q.—How did you know where to find it? A.—Barney had told me how to reach the point from the centre of the town when we talked about it.

Q.—Did you stop at Washington place? A.—Not quite at Washington place, a little way away.

Q.—Did you get out? A.—Yes.

Q.—About how far from Washington place? A.—About half a mile.

Q.—When you got out of the car did you go to any house? A.—No. I knew Barney's habit. I knew that when he stated a certain point that he would be found at one or the other sides of it. I told O'Halloran to go to the left and I would go to the right. I found him just as I thought, some distance from where he said he would meet us

Q.—When was that? A.—At 11 o'clock on Wednesday.

Q.—Where was Mr. Tufts? A.—We left him in the car while we went along the road to search for Barney.

Q.—What happened when you found Barney? A.—He walked to the car with me.

Lawyer Met Barney Behind Woodpile in Cambridge

Stephen C. Bresnahan, a Cambridge lawyer, was the first witness called in the Tufts case. He told of a midnight conference which he had with Barney in the Bresnahan home on the night Barney escaped and of an interview he had with Barney behind a lumber pile in Russell Field, Cambridge. The story told by Bresnahan on the witness stand gave many features hitherto unpublished concerning the surrender of Barney.

Attorney Hurlburt — How many times did you see Barney in all after his escape? A.—Three or four times. The night he left Cambridge I talked with him while he was hiding behind a lumber pile in Cambridge. He was alone and I was alone. The next time I saw him was the Saturday before he was taken back to prison. At that time I saw him at the home of Joseph Meisse at Northampton.

Q.—What did he do? A.—After he shook hands with O'Halloran he said, "How do you do" to Tufts.

Q.—What was said by Barney? A.—He told Tufts that he wanted to have a chance to change his clothes before he went back. I told Barney that his mother was anxious for him to return at once, and that she said that he should not wait for three days. Mr. Tufts said he wanted Barney to come back at once and that he should not bother to change his clothes, but come as he was.

Q.—What did Barney say to that? A.—He said, "What the hell is there to be afraid of? You don't have to be afraid. I'll go back and change my clothes and return." Tufts said, "All right, you can do that if you wish, but take Inspector O'Halloran with you." Barney said, "I don't want to do that. I don't want to mix up the people, where I have been stopping, with the case. I prefer to go alone." Attorney Tufts said, "All right, then, you must take Attorney Bresnahan along with you." He consented to that. I went with him while he changed his clothes.

"Barney changed his clothes in the Meissi House. He appeared to be sore. Mrs. Meissi said, 'It is the best thing for you to do,' and Barney said, 'What, do you want me to go back to a place like that?' and she said, 'No, but you made the agreement to return and you ought to go through with it.'"

Q.—What else happened there? A.—I think she pressed his clothes and a necktie. Then she got him something to eat and I had something to eat. When I saw that we wouldn't be back in half an hour I left the house and went back to O'Halloran and Tufts. I told them that Barney would be a little bit late.

Q.—Where was Barney at that time? A.—In the house.

Q.—What did Tufts say when you returned? A.—He said, "What the Hell did you leave him in there alone for?" and I told him there was no fear. Tufts said: "By George! you must have great confidence in that man," and I said: "I have. He has surrendered five times before."

Q.—Did you return to the house? A.—Yes. When I got back Barney had left. I feared that he had become frightened at the last minute. Mrs. Messi said that he might be at another house. I went there and I was told that he had just gone. Then I went back to the Meissi house and he was not there. Then I went back to Tufts and said: "I guess he got cold feet at the last minute." Then I went back to the Meissi house and Mrs. Meissi said he had come back and gone out again.

MET BARNEY ON STREET.

"Then I left the house and went back toward the machine and I met Barney on the street. He had probably walked around the square in the opposite direction. He walked over to the machine and stepped into the machine and said: 'I am ready!'"

Q.—How long was Barney gone out of sight of O'Halloran and Tufts? A.—I think probably three quarters of an hour.

Q.—And then you saw Barney come around the square and get into the car with O'Halloran and Tufts? A.—Yes.

The party then drove from Northampton to Greenfield, leaving Northampton at noon. He testified that they went to a hotel at Greenfield, where someone got out of the car and got some sandwiches.

Bresnahan said he got the police car in the garage at Greenfield and drove it home, leaving O'Halleran, Tufts and Barney in the other car.

"We followed each other," he said, "and I lost them between Fitchburg and Gardner. That was the last I saw of their car. Once during the trip we stopped and got a drink. O'Halleran got out of the car and brought out some sodas. I got out of the police car I was driving, went up to the other car and talked with Barney a few minutes."

STATEMENT WAS UNTRUE.

Bresnahan admitted seeing an article in the newspapers next day containing a statement written by Tufts explaining the surrender of Barney.

Q.—You knew that they were untrue statements there? (Attorney Johnson arose here and said, "We have admitted one of the statements in that statement was literally untrue. Is it contended that any other statements are not true?" Mr. Hurlburt replied: "I contend that this statement given out by Tufts was made to deceive the public. I concould agree, but apparently we canfalse" Johnson said, "I thought we could agreed, but apparently we cannot.")

A little later Johnson said that the defence admitted that the section in Tufts' statement that he had seen Barney in or just outside Brattleboro, Vt., was not correct.

Q.—Did you see any women pressing clothes for Barney in the Northampton House? A.—My impression is she did. I wouldn't swear to it.

Q.—How many times was the police machine in Northampton? A.—Twice. It was there on the first visit and again later.

Q.—This statement issued by Mr. Tufts when Barney surrendered states that Barney was returning because he had recovered his health. Did you know that Barney lost five pounds from the time he escaped until he returned? A.—I don't know whether he lost or gained, but I knew he was sick.

Q.—And in no form of word did you tell any public official that you knew where Barney was, although you had seen him at your house and in some field in Cambridge and although you had received a letter from him? A.—I didn't know where he was. He was in my house only for about three minutes.

Q.—And you gave no information to any public official about the whereabouts of Barney, the convict? A.—I didn't know where he was. I told O'Halleran that I thought I could get in touch with Barney and I thought I could get him to surrender.

SAID HE'D KILL BARNEY.

Q.—Did you speak to any other public official about the matter? A.—I spoke to Officer Harney of Cambridge and he said that he would kill Barney on sight and talk afterwards. Officer Morrissey of Cambridge said the same thing.

Q.—You were not counsel for Barney were you? A.—I certainly was.

Q.—Wasn't Thomas Murphy his counsel? A.—No.

The witness was then cross-examined by Attorney Johnson.

Q.—During the whole episode, from beginning to end, did you ever tell Tufts where Barney was? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever give him any information as to where Barney was? A.—I didn't tell him where he was.

Q.—And you refused to tell where Barney was? A.—Yes.

Bresnahan stated that he met Tufts and O'Halleran at the railroad station at 2 a. m.

Q.—It was about daylight, wasn't it? A.—Yes.

Q.—As a matter of fact Tufts was there only a short time, wasn't he? A.—Yes.

TO PROTECT MEISSI.

Q.—About three or four hours, wasn't it? A.—About that time.

Q.—What did you say to Mr. Tufts? A.—I told him that if I was not permitted to go about this matter in my own way he could go and paddle his own canoe. I told him I wanted to produce Barney and that I could not take him to the place where Barney was for reasons. The reason I had in mind was that I did not want to involve another party. I wanted to be safe in producing Barney without involving Mr. Meissi.

Q.—You refused to allow Mr. Tufts to go with you to see Barney, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Witness declared he intended to wash his hands of the case if either Tufts or O'Halloran attempted to follow him. He told O'Halloran he had been seen near a farmhouse near Brattleboro.

Q.—Was the letter you received from Barney dated Brattleboro, Vt.? A.—I am not positive whether it was or not.

Q.—Did Barney post the letter? A.—Mr. Meissi posted it for him.

Q.—How long were you away after your conversation with Tufts and O'Halleran? A.—I might have been gone two or three hours. I cannot say how long. I lost track of the time.

Q.—You were absent for a substantial period of the time? A.—I was.

Q.—Now at that first interview with Mr. Tufts on Tuesday morning at Northampton, did you say that Barney was on a farm four or five miles away? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then you ordered them to stay and went on alone? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell the chauffeur your destination? A.—I told the chauffeur to wait until I returned after we got to a certain point.

Q.—Did the chauffeur know where Barney was? A.—I don't think I told him.

Q.—Did the car in which you were driving stop in front of the Meissi house? A.—The car never went to the Meissi house.

Q.—Where did the car go? A.—The car drove half-way up to the Meissi house.

Q.—Didn't the car stop at the Meissi house? A.—At no time while I was in the car did the car go to the Meissi house. I did everything that was possible to be done from keeping Mr. Meissi from being involed in the case. I positively insisted that O'Halleran and Tufts should let me go and attend to the matter in my own way.

Q.—In consequence of the message you sent to Tufts and O'Halleran, they met you at Northampton at 2 a. m. that day? A.—Yes.

The witness declared that he was trying to keep the whole matter a secret.

QUIZZED BY CHIEF JUSTICE.

Q.—Was Barney ill? A.—He was suffering from gall stones.

Q.—You know he was recently operated upon at the State prison? A.—I do.

The witness was about to step down to allow O'Hallaran to testify when Chief Justice Rugg questioned him about Tufts' acquaintanceship with Barney. He testified to questions by the chief justice that Tufts knew Barney because Barney had been fined $500 in East Cambridge court following an indictment by the Middlesex County Grand Jury. He said Tufts prosecuted the case.

Q.—So far as you know, that was the basis of him knowing Barney? A.—Yes.

Bresnahan, in response to another question concerning his knowledge of Barney's whereabouts, said: "Barney came to my house after his escape from State,s prison and wanted me to tell him to what country he could go and stay without being extradited.

He told of his getting in communication with Mr. O'Halleran witr reference to Barney.

"I told him I was acting for Barney," he continued, "and was in a position to get him to surrender. My first conversation with Tufts about Barney was at 2 a. m. on the day before Barney surrendered."

Witness said he acted as counsel for Barney's father and mother.

Attorney-General Allen showed the witness a typewritten statement, which Allen claimed Bresnahan had made to Hurlburt in Allen's office in the State House, October 28, 1920, and with the corrections supplement December 9.

Allen started to have Bresnahan point out corrections he had made in order to attack the credibility of the [illegible] when Attorney Johnson objected. Johnson said that Bresnahan [illegible] own witness and he was there to answer anything he asked and that anything in the statement that was not asked him was irrelevant.

TWO WOMEN WITNESSES AT THE TUFTS TRIAL

Mrs. Maria Leonardi (inset), of No. 172 Fuller street, Brookline, testified to renting an apartment to a "Mrs. Webber" whom Attorney Hurlburt declares is "Brownie" Kennedy. Mrs. Joseph Meissi (larger picture) is ready to take the stand in the Barney case.

Mrs. Meissi and her husband occupy the house in Northampton where Gunman Barney lived following his sensational escape from prison.

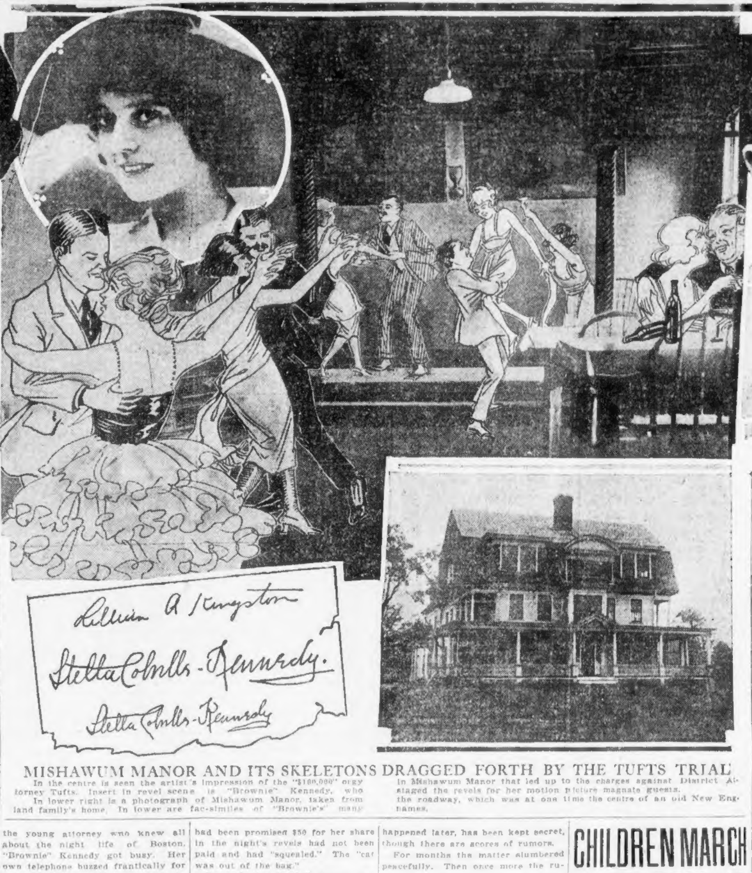
TRAGEDY OF WEAK WOMEN AND RECKLESS MEN BEHIND TUFTS TRIAL

ACTORS AND THE PRIMROSE PATH SCENE IN SINISTER DRAMA THAT FOLLOWED ORGY

DANIEL H. COAKLEY



MISHAWUM MANOR AND ITS SKELETONS DRAGGED FORTH BY THE TUFTS TRIAL

In the centre is seen the artist's impression of the "$100,000" orgy in Mishawum Manor that led up to the charges against District Attorney Tufts. Insert in revel scene is "Brownie" Kennedy, who staged the revels for her motion picture magnate guests.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY NATHAN A. TUFTS

FUND FAILS TO HUSH SCANDAL

Corruption, betrayal of high trust, debauchery of young women, and blackmail—all these and still other sinister skeletons are being dragged into the light as the trial of Nathan A. Tufts, District Attorney of Middlesex County, proceeds day by day in the solemn and deliberate process of the law.

One by one the unsavory details come forth, half disguised in their habit of legal formalism, but making a mosaic of bestiality and deceit and greed.

Men holding offices of trust are accused of trafficking with panderers; attorneys sworn to uphold the law are charged with using their influence to defeat the ends of justice in return for money extorted by threat.

MANOR IN BACKGROUND.

In the background of the picture stands a house in Woburn once the centre of a New England home. Children played around its gardens, under the trees, back from the road. Honest, open life ran its course within the walls.

But it is no such homely drama that is playing itself out in this setting as presented before the five justices of the Massachusetts Supreme Court in Pemberton square.

The honest home has become a dwelling of mysterious activities. By day all is silence. The place is shunned.

Only after nightfall, when honest folk are long asleep, does the Woburn house awake. Then the windows blaze with light. The trees that echoed the shouts and laughter of children ring with the syncopated measures of "jazz."

Young women enter the doors furtively, and men boisterously lurch out of automobiles and follow them inside.

For this once honest cottage has become a "manor," so-called. To be exact, its disignation is "Brownie" Kennedy's Mishawum Manor. A roadhouse—a place of illicit pleasure.

About this resort, with its music, its orgies, its blatant clattering noises and its strange silences, the grizzly story revolves.

CHAPTER I.

The Dinner to "Fatty" Arbuckle.

"Fatty" Arbuckle never did a mean thing in his life, but he is indirectly responsible for one of the most ghastly scandals that has ever shaken official and social Boston.

For th famous or infamous—depending upon your point of view—"chicken and champagne" dinner at "Brownie" Kennedy's Mishawum Manor in Woburn grew out of the perfectly decent and decorous banquet given in honor of the stout film comedian.

Banquet Was Almost Too Dignified.

It was on the evening of March 6, 1917. More than 150 guests of high estate gathered at the Copley Plaza Hotel to do honor to "Fatty." There was an ex-attorney general of Massachusetts there, a member of the Governor's Council, bankers, brokers, railroad executives, attorneys past all counting, a member of Congress from Boston. It ranked as a most dignified affair—almost too dignified.

"Fatty" and the moving picture men like Adolph Zukor, Hiram Abrams and their friends alone saved it from becoming almost dull.

And it broke up early. The speeches were short and to the point and when the last of them had said his say the party broke up.

It was still the shank of the evening as one young attorney protested, and he got busy and gathered together "the live ones" of the party and suggested that the rest of the night might be pleasantly spent at "Brownie" Kennedy's well known resort in Woburn.

"Live Ones" Leave For Mishawum Manor.

To the moving picture men, who were not familiar with the place, this "listened good" and they joined in.

The young attorney jumped to the telephone and in a few moments announced that the arrangements had been made. The party started in several automobiles.

The staid guests at the Arbuckle banquet put on their coats and left for bed, Fatty among them.

And that ended the first chapter.

CHAPTER II.

Mishawum Manor.

Meantime out at Mishawum Manor, where "Brownie" Kennedy—of the many aliases and unsavory reputation—was mistress, the telephone message from the young attorney started things humming.

"Brownie" had a little book bound in scarlet—an appropriate color which Hawthorne chose when he wanted to write of a woman who had started along the path "Brownie" Kennedy had deliberately chosen, but had not gone as far as "Brownie."

In that book, which has since become notorious, "Brownie" kept a long list of names. There were girls recorded there—girls and not a few married women. And in another section of the book was a list of men—patrons she called them all.

"Brownie" Mobilizes Her Girls.

When she got the message from the young attorney who knew all about the night life of Boston, "Brownie" Kennedy got busy. Her own telephone buzzed frantically for a time and presently there began to come a-trooping under the trees that shaded the old home that had once been the play spots for happy children, furtive figures of women. Some of them came afoot, cloaked against the cold and wet. Others arrived in taxis. But all were young and all were pretty save for that strange hardened look that goes with the profession followed by "Brownie" Kennedy and her "girls."

Hardly after the last of the girls, there were twelve or fourteen of them, according to most accounts of the affair, hurried through the big doors of the manor and disappeared upstairs to make ready for the night when a big public car dashed up to the front of the house and disgorged its load of laughing, frolicking men.

Two other cars followed rapidly. "Brownie" Kennedy, a perfect hostess at affairs of this sort, was waiting in the dimly lighted hall. Some of the men knew her and called her "Brownie." To others she was Lillian A. Kingston. She had as many names as she had records of arrest—this woman of the scarlet past.

There was a moment or two of that scramble that always attends the coming of a large party and then the fun began. Down the stairs came the girls—pretty girls, some of them almost beautiful.

Revels Were Talk of Filmdom.

What happened afterwards? It would take a Paul de Koch to tell the story as it should be told; although, perhaps, Guy De Maupassant could turn the trick.

Since then it has been denied that the moving picture men were intoxicated. Witnesses had insisted that "none of the gentlemen got rough." But the tales of what happened at the Manor that night when the 'live ones' left the 'Copley-Plaza to "see the thing through," was the talk of filmdom from Boston to Hollywood for months.

CHAPTER III.

The Conspiracy.

And then came the aftermath. There is always an aftermath to "Brownie" Kennedy's parties.

Pretty soon there came to be whispered about in the studios here and in New York that "the big bosses got nipped out there at Woburn."

The rumors spread. Huge sums were mentioned as the amount of "hush money" the movie kings had been forced to "pony up" to keep the thing out of the papers. They ran from $100,000 to a cool million dollars, for moving picture people are used to dealing with big figures.

Long before the rumors had got as far as Los Angeles though, things began happening in Boston.

"Brownie" Kennedy, like the pitcher that goes too often to the well, was nipped. Her perfect "system" broke down and police officers raided her place.

Girls "Squeal" and Scandal Spreads.

Like fire through dry grass the story ran. One of the "girls" who had been promised $50 for her share in the night's revels had not been paid and had "squealed." The "cat was out of the bag."

One of the "girls," Bessie McDonald, claimed to have a husband living in Worcester. His name was Tierney. Another girl, who had played the jazz music for the party that night, also, had a "husband." His name, he said was Lord.

The first ripple of the flood that was soon to break against their dykes of silence so confidently regarded by the film men came lapping, lapping their way.

It was in the shape of a threat that unless "settlement" was made suits for "alienation of affections" would be brought against certain of the moving picture crowd and that the others would be dragged in.

Lawyers Hired to Stop Publicity.

There was a scurrying and frantic telephone and telegraphing between Gotham and the Hub. Men cringed at the thought of the pitiless publicity that would be theirs if the thing "ever comes to light." Married men began to remember that they had families and wives at home.

They were frantic. Then gently, higher and higher, rose the flood toward the bursting point. Hiram Abrams was named as sort of representative at large of the frightened coterie. Big lawyers were engaged here. Money was no object. Publicity must be stopped. "Buy off the girls; shut their mouths; get Brownie Kennedy out of the country and do it quick."

One hundred thousand dollars was the price asked by Attorney Daniel H. Coakley, in whose capable hands the "crowd" had placed its interests.

It was his. The attorney for the husbands claiming damages for the loss of affections that could hardly have been worth quite as much.

Movie Men Fancied They Were Safe.

Coakley has testified that he himself paid no money personally. But his assistant, Sughrue, did, and got $13,000 for the doing.

Coakley told his clients they were safe. He had releases, signed by the names of the girls in whose behalf the suits had been threatened. No need to worry. The matter was "settled" for good and for all. It belonged in the limbo of the dead past. Cover it with cobwebs and forget it.

CHAPTER IV.

The Storm Bursts.

It depends largely upon your point of view how you regard what followed. Some say it was dirty politics that induced the crash. Others that brave officials did their duty in bringing to book men who had violated their solemn obligations of office.

Expose Follows After Year.

No matter. The thing, from the standpoint of the men who attended the Mishawum orgy, was that Attorney General Allen set Attorney Hurlburt to work.

Just how Mr. Hurlburt got in touch with the story of Mishawum Manor and what happened there, and the even more significant things that had happened later, has been kept secret, though there are scores of rumors.

For months the matter slumbered peacefully. Then once more the rumors began seeping through the moving picture offices, from New York to Los Angeles.

"They are stung good this time—can't buy off the gang that's on their heels."

So ran the rumors. And they were more or less correct, as rumors sometimes are.

In the Spring, more than a year after the dinner, Attorney-General Allen exploded his petard. It burst with a blare that was heard to the most remote corner of filmdom.

No names were mentioned at first but every man in the moving picture game except some of the rankest of "extras" knew about the "dinner" and knew that the time when the details were to be revealed was at hand.

Revelers Confess To Hurlburt.

Although they had paid $100,000 to keep the matter secret the moving men, once they realized that the inevitable had overtaken them, that they were caught by the tide of publicity, 'came through.' Those interviewed by Attorney Hurlburt made a clean breast of the part they had played. They gave names and facts and figures.

What the attorney general knows no one outside his own office and mighty few inside can guess. But it is certain that for the general public the tale of the Mishawum Manor orgy and the conspiracy that followed has been made of common knowledge by the very men who paid most outrageously to keep it all hidden.

IDENTITY, ISSUE IN SACCO CASE, SAYS JUDGE

Judge Thayer in the Dedham Superior Criminal Court today, charged the jury in the trial of Bartolomeo Vanzetti and Nicola Sacco, charged with the murder of the South Braintree paymaster and guard. In his address the judge told the jury that "the issue to be decided here is the narrow one of identity."

The udge urged the jurors "not to allow the fact that the defendants are Italians to influence you in the least degree. They are entitled to the same rights they would have had had their ancestors on both sides the house come over in the Mayflower."

CHILDREN MARCH IN PROTEST AT SODA PRICES

ice cream sodas for 10 cents, and that to charge us children more than that is not right.

"Will you please make the ice-cream dealers do right? It is awfully hot now and the doctors tell us to eat ice-cream, but how can we eat it when papa cannot afford to buy it for us at the high prices?

"Please make the ice-cream dealers do right."

The children marched back to the Common, where Representative Hines and Lieutenant Hurley spoke to them from the Parkman bandstand.

REDUCTIONS ANNOUNCED.

Soda and ice cream parlors and some drug stores in and about the city are reducing the prices of their frozen delicacy as a result of the crusade which was instituted by the Boston American.

In many cases large signs are posted in store windows announcing the reduction in the prices of ice cream and ice cream cones. Some storekeepers are still camouflaging a cut in prices by printing large numerals for the price of soda and ice cream and displaying the one and two-cent war tax in very small letters underneath.

Some signs copied by investigators in certain stores read: Cream soda, nine cents, with one cent war tax; ice cream cones, four cents, with one cent war tax; egg, malted milk and ice cream, twenty-two cents, with three-cent war tax; college ices, thirteen cents, war tax two cents; chocolate float, fifteen cents, plus two-cent tax; soda, ice cream, fifteen cents; fresh fruit lemonade, fifteen cents; twenty-cent malted milk now fifteen cents; twenty-cent egg phosphate now fifteen cents; fifteen-cent milk shake now ten cents.

Lynn Gougers May Lose Sunday Licenses

The most drastic action in the campaign against ice-cream and soda profiteers became known today when Mayor Walter E. Creamer of Lynn announced that he had asked the City Council of that city to revoke the Sunday licenses of all common victuallers who are charging extortionate prices.

Mayor Creamer's action was regarded as especially far-reaching because the alleged profiteers would suffer the greatest loss by the curtailment of their Sunday business.

Mayor Peter F. Sullivan of Worcester has informed the commission that he has assigned an expert to investigate conditions there and he may call a public meeting of protest against ice-cream and soda prices.

FEAR MRS. KABER WAS POISONED WHEN BABE

Alienist Blames Sore on Mother's Finger for Widow's "Insane Conruct"

By International News Service.

Cleveland, O., July 14.—A sore on her mother's finger before her birth, affected the baby brain of Mrs. Catherine Eva Kaber and was partly responsible for her disordered mind, which plotted the murder of Daniel Kaber, rich Cleveland publisher, Dr. James Kassell, formerly first assistant physician at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Washington, D. C., government institution for the insane, testified at the woman's trial today.

The sore finger had poisoned the mother and the poisoned blood transmitted to the child while nursing at her breast had much to do with the "insane conduct" of the accused woman later in life, the alienist declared.

Mrs. Gertrude Rossiter, who preceded the physician on the stand, also expressed the opinion the accused woman is insane.

Woman Overcome by Heat

Mary R. H. Baker, of the Franklin Square House, South End, collapsed from the heat in front of No. 41 West Newton street. She was taken to the City Hospital.

MAYOR PETERS IN EXHIBITION AS LIFE-SAVER

Shows Several Thousand How to Rescue Bathers From Drowning

Andrew J. Peters, five feet nine inches tall, weighing 185 pounds, and incidentally Mayor of Boston, turned life-saver at the Savin Hill Beach baths, Dorchester, today and showed 3,000 women, girls and boys, with a sprinkling of men, what to do with persons in danger of drowning.

He was assisted in the demonstration—which lasted more than an hour—by Commodore William E. Longfellow, national field agent of the Life-Saving Department, American Red Cross, who is six feet two inches tall, and weighs in his sea-green bathing suit a fraction over 220 pounds.

The first stunt pulled off by the Mayor and his husky aide was the one in which the life-saver seizes the drowning man by the hair. This had to be done by the Mayor, as Longfellow had a monopoly of hirsute adornment, the Mayor's not being sufficient for the purpose.

Then came the hip and elbow trick, in which the Mayor again showed his ability, and that was followed by a number of other stunts, the most difficult being the chin rescue, in which His Honor struggled desperately to save Longfellow.

The demonstration wound up with a lesson in first aid to persons in distress in the water.

PROBE MYSTERY IN MOTORCYCLE CRASH

The Chelsea police are investigating a mysterious accident at Broadway, Chelsea, near the Revere line, in which two men on a motorcycle crashed into a telegraph pole. One of the victims picked up the machine and sped away while the other man was rushed to Chelsea Memorial Hospital by Joseph Herman of No. 35 Fair street, New Bedford. At the hospital the man was found to be suffering from a fractured skull. From papers found on his person it is believed by the police he is Noble Marshall of Parnell street, Boston.

CAPE COD RESIDENTS PROTEST LIGHT SERVICE

Summer residents of Hyannis and surrounding Cape Cod resorts, irritated at what they allege to be poor service, today called upon the Department of Public Utilities to make an investigation of the operations of the Cape and Vineyard Electric Company. The scores of persons who have petitioned for the investigation say that service is undependable and that recently it was entirely suspended for four days. The department will make an inquiry.

CONNOLLY TOLD IRISH COULD NOT HAVE U. S. RELIEF

James B. Connolly, the famous New England author and journalist, who was sent to Ireland to investigate the charge that "no relief money was getting to Ireland, but was being used to buy arms for the Irish army" and that there was "no distress in Ireland anyhow," has returned filled with horror at the things he has seen and heard in that "most distressful country."

It has the vivid personal touch of the expert writer who knows what he is writing about and writes with his heart in every word.

TORTURED IRELAND.

By JAMES B. CONNOLLY.
Famous New England Author and Journalist.

CHAPTER IV.

Before starting for the south of Ireland I went to see the American consul in Dublin. To him I said: "As I am an American citizen and interested in the work of the American Relief Committee and as they are engaged in a work that any civilized government must endorse, shouldn't I be allowed to travel in Ireland without permission or interference from anybody?"

To which our consul replied: "You can't travel like that. You will have to see the British authorities here."

From what I already knew of conditions in Ireland, he could very well have said: "And you had better see the I. R. A. authorities also.'

While his clerk was calling H. Q. at Dublin Castle we talked, he mostly of the burdens of his office. For one thing, here were some chaps who had been living in Ireland oh—for ten or fifteen years—and had been shot up or their property had been destroyed by the crown people, they still claiming to be American citizens.

"But there're not American citizens," said our consul.

"What are they?" I asked.

He did not know. It seemed to peeve him that they preferred to remain American citizens.

Sentiment of Irish People Ignored by U. S. Consul

He had been planted in Dublin by the Wilson administration, one of those queer birds who acted as if the sentiment of the Irish people among whom he lived had nothing to do with his office.

We went on to talk about war conditions.' Of course, if England cared to crush Ireland—so he put it—she could do it without firing a shot. She could, for instance, refuse to buy a dollar's worth of stuff from Ireland.

To which my thought that she never wore a reputation for soft dealing with small nations, why doesn't she do that, was too obvious to put into words.

"The balance of trade is so much in England's favor that—" he was going on.

"What are the figures?" I asked.

"Why, I don't know exactly."

"Not exactly, but roughly."

He did not know them roughly. And a fine thing that! Here was a man making a positive statement, first as to a fact, then rendering a judgment based on that fact, and then having to confess that he wasn't sure of his basic fact. And it was such an everyday fact as he, an American consul in Ireland, should have had with a thousand others at his tongue tip.

Wondered What His Report to Washington Would Be

I wondered what twist such a man was giving to his reports to Washington of happenings in Ireland.

General Macready, commander-in-chief of the British army in Ireland, not being in Dublin at this time, I went to see his chief of staff instead, taking a tram for a change and asking the tram conductor when I got off, the way to the entrance to military headquarters.

The tram man gave me a fine looking over: "You have business with headquarters?"

"I have.'

He gave me another fine inspection, then my sailing directions and gave me a grand final going over as I walked off. Ten years from now, if that tram man should meet me in Hong Kong, I know that he will know me; and therein was a pointer to the thousand reasons why the unpaid Secret Service of the I. R. A. in Ireland is probably better than that of Dublin Castle. The English Secret Service is the most extensive in the world, but they are all hired men. Ireland gets service that money cannot buy.

About twenty soldiers were laying down hot tar on the walk between the gate and the barracks building, when the sentry sent up my name; another twenty or so were going through a rifle drill; a lorry load of soldiers were going out, another lorry load coming in from patrol.

Former 'Gob' in Yankee Navy a Member of British Guard

One of the armed guard inside the entrance was a middle-aged man, a shaggly mustache and a shape like a piece of string. He was talking earnestly to his pal on watch, an open-mouthed young soldier of nineteen or so. "Fourteen years in India, and then I says there's goin' to be no more wars—we'd done in all these Indian chaps that was to be done in—and so I gives over the army and goes to the Stites—to a plice called Philadephy.

"An' I'm doing so, so there when the big war comes on. I've no fancy to come back 'ere for the pie they offers a chap an' so I joins up with the Yankee Nivy. Twenty pound a month is nothing in the Yankee Nivy."

"Twenty pound a month!"

"Twenty pound. I gets a billet with a quartermaster on a dock like. I don't care how long the war 'angs on. But it ends and I've no job comin' to me. An' then comes this war an' I joins up for it. But I lost me bloody pension joinin' up with the Yanks, an' who's goin', I sie, to make up the pension to me?"

By and by I was carefully handed on to the office of the chief of staff, and I told him at once what I had in mind—to travel through the south and west of Ireland to see if distress existed there, adding also the word that I intended to have a general look around while there.

"Can I go as an American citizen without special papers, or must I have a special permit to travel?" I asked.

"You cannot travel about the South without the permission of General Strickland, who is in command of all the martial law area."

American Relief Money Withheld From Irish

The chief of staff was a balmy, smiling kind in the beginning; but after a while as the conversational pace was forced, some of his balmy manner slipped from him. He began to disparage the attainments of President de Valera, which did not please me, and I soon let him know that; whereat he eased himself away from that subject.

"General," I said, "the statement has been published in my country that no distress exists in Ireland. Can you tell me something about that?"

"Undoubtedly there is some distress, but not so much as the press of your country sometimes have it."

"The statement has been published in my country that American relief money has been used for the purchase of arms and ammunition for the I. R. A., what of that?"

"They are too cute for that."

Which I thought a cheap reply for a man in his position to make. I had already learned that they were not so used, and what a man but a few days in Ireland had learned, the extensive Secret Service of the British army must have learned long before.

"General, what about allowing American relief money to go to the support of families in need, families of men who have been driven from home by the Crown forces?"

"We will allow no money to go to the support of families of men who are in the field, on the run, in jail or interned."

Compares with German Frightfulness in Belgium

It was such a brutal thing to say that I wanted to be sure I had it right, and I put the question again, and received his answer in exactly the same words, except that the second time he prefaced it with, "No! Absolutely no!"

Later, in Cork, I put that same question to General Strickland, and got exactly the same answer. Yet later I put the question to General Macready, and got again the same answer.

Consider that announced decision! To the German army during its occupation of Belgium, the allies (particularly the English) had attributed all sorts of frightful measures. Yet the Germans had never, not even when they felt strong enough to defy the world, refused to allow American relief to the needy families of Belgian soldiers in the field.

I asked for the crown point of view of the war. He talked at some length; the rebels would have to be put down, the murders must cease, and so on.

By "murders" he plainly included the killing of armed soldiers killed in the war area. I had been talking already with several Sinn Feiners, and they certainly charged the Crown forces with many murders, but they never spoke of the killing of one of their own in action as a murder.

I could not forego saying to him that, of course, he must have heard something of the things said about the conduct of the R. I. C. (Black and Tans) by Irish people generally. (General Crozier, formerly second in command of the Black and Tans in Ireland, was even then giving to the press in London his bitter condemnation of Black and Tan methods).

"Does General Macready control the actions of the R. I. A. in Dublin?"

Fine Sample of Macready's "Passing the Buck"

"Not exactly. Three companies of the auxiliaries (Black and Tans) are under General Macready's orders, but he has no power to discipline them."

Which I thought was a fine little sample of passing the buck. The man who did have the power to discipline them (General Tudor) would no doubt say that where he had not given orders, how could he be held responsible?

I asked him if he approved the burning of the creameries.

"The creameries—they are places in which the rebels assembled in large numbers, and from which they shot our boys. We had to burn them for our protection!"

I put that up to a member of De Valera's ministry afterwards. His answer was: "The Crown government have not had a single soldier or policeman shot from any creamery. The creameries were burned as an economic . . . measure, even as over 3,000 of our best men are now in jail or interned (with no ilies to live, the British govern- charges preferred against them) to make it harder for their fam- ment is even now laying an embargo on Irish cattle into England, trying to fasten a mythical hoof and mouth disease on our cattle—it is all part of the economic pressure to reduce Ireland to subjection."

A sour-looking man had come in. I could not get what for, unless it was to study me, which he did from every angle while I talked to his chief. Colonel Stewart (I think) was his name. He butted in to say: "What did the creameries amount to—little cottages, that were not—"

Americans Unwelcome In Martial Law Area

I looked at the chief of sta, almost saying to him, "Your team play, old top, is being shot to pieces." And he gave the colonel a sharp look and said: "Oh, no, they were not small cottages. They were good-sized buildings, with room for a great deal of machinery in them."

He asked me: "Would your American Relief Committee be willing, do you suppose, to succor the sufferers on our side from this fighting?"

To which I answered: "Why not—the fund being for Irish relief, if they are Irish?"

He did not seem to like that answer, and said no more of that.

Before I left Brind he gave me a note of identification to General Strickland. Identification — that is about all there was to it. There was no recommendation of any kind in it. General Strickland has full command in the martial law area, were the parting words of this chief of staff. I did not need to be told by this bland party that Americans were not to be made welcome in the martial law area in Ireland.

4,000 Armed Soldiers To Seize 300 Men

I took an early morning train out of Dublin to Cork. At Thurles, an armed guard of twenty armed men from an English regiment were taken aboard to protect the mail van.

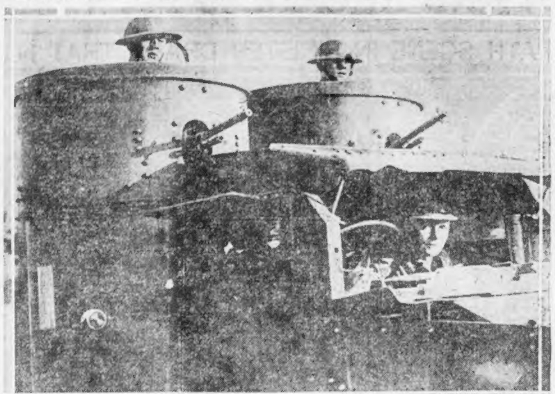
There was a traveling man beside me, with whom I had already opened up a talking acquaintanceship.

"Twenty odd rifles in one mail van," said he, "and last week out on the Kerry hills, they had 3,000 or 4,000 odd English soldiery with steel-sided lorries, armed cars and machine guns and aeroplanes circling overhead, hoping to roundup 200 or maybe 300 men with no more than rifles or revolvers, and the half of such they had to capture from the police and soldiers themselves before they ever could have the use of them."

At every station were Black and Tans and soldiery. They were there to scrutinize every passenger who got off or went on the train and to guard what mail might be dumped off. The I. R. A., it seems, had been capturing the mail pretty regularly from the trains of late.

CONTINUED TOMORROW.

BRITAIN'S IRON HAND CLAMPED DOWN ON HAPLESS ERIN



One of the commonest scenes in the troubled areas of Ireland is the armored cars shown above to protect the Black and Tans in their warfare against the Sinn Fein. At right is a Black and Tan standing calmly by, pistol in hand, ready for action.

SKEFFINGTON DENIES RESIGNATION REPORT

Commissioner of Immigration Skeffington today issued a formal statement in response to reports from Washington that he had been asked to resign and had refused to make way for John G. Hagberg, appointed to succeed him.

CHAMBER TAKES OFFICIALS ON HARBOR TOUR

Guests Include Shipping Men, Army Officers and City and State Dignitaries

One hundred prominent shipping men and shippers associated with the Boston Chamber of Commerce, accompanied by army officers and officials of the city and State, were guests of the chamber today on a trip over Boston harbor.

The party made the tour on the army boat General Thomas S. Jessup, starting from the army base, South Boston, after an inspection of the pier and the drydock, the largest in the country. Railroad and steamship terminals in Boston, East Boston and Charlestown were visited.

The trip was staged by the chamber as a part of its campaign to bring out the great possibility of Boston as a shipping centre and to foster the co-operation of all classes in the development of the harbor.

'CAFE AU LAIT' TO BE COLOR FOR FALL GOWNS

Madame Frances Returns to New York Wearing Clothes She Made Herself

New York, July 14.—You know the seductive softness of your morning coffee when a great deal of cream has been added?

Such will be the soothing tone of Autumn.

For the entire feminine world will garnish itself in "cafe au lait."

This astonishing sartorial secret was revived today by Madame Frances, style creator, importer and arbiter of fashion, immediately upon her arrival here after her semi-annual trip to Paris.

Madame, who is the head of Frances, Inc., one of the most fashionable and exclusive shops of the Fifty-seventh street district, returned on the Mauretania after only a month abroad.

"There was no reason for my remaining. Paris is showing nothing that America doesn't design, make and sell better. It is all very bad in the French capital. Few are offering striking models. Still fewer are buying. Lethargy of interest following upon the war is the cause, no doubt. I found no enterprise; no stimulation. No ideas. Nothing to bring to American women. That was the reason for my hurried return."

Instead of wearing some startling creation fresh from the Rue De La Paix, Madame wore an American-made garment and hat to match. She made them herself.

"Ididn't see a single thing abroad that I liked as well as this," Madame said. "As a matter of fact Mary Miles Minter, who was in Paris to shop, insisted upon buying a duplicate of this costume off my very back! Mitzi Hajos, whom I met, said she went to Paris to buy a wardrobe and came back with a toothpick!

"There isn't any place like home, is there?"

As for lines and things, Madame Frances refused to take seriously anything she saw in Paris. Skirts going out of her shops will continue to be eleven inches from the ground; collars low; sleeves long. And she puts her endorsement on "blond" stockings!

Northeast Harbor seems to be a popular watering place for quite a few of the Hub's society folk who are seeking the cool breezes of the Maine coast. I note that several well-known personages are "harbored" there including Mr. Joseph H. Curtis, Mrs. Gideon Scull, Mrs. William Pratt, Mr. and Mrs. Herber Lyman and Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Eliot.

Mrs. George Peabody Gardner, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, 2d, are among the prominent Bostonians who have leased bath houses for the Summer at Hazards Beach, Newport. This beach, which is one of the most popular of the private bathing places of Newport, is this year under the management of the Hill-top Inn, and arrangements have now been made to allow the hotel patrons, as well as those from the Muenchinger-King and New Cliffs to have bathing privileges.

Speaking of Newport brings to mind the news that the Polish Minister and Princess Lubomirska will spend their second season at Newport this Summer. They have taken apartments at Bateman's, near the Westchester Polo grounds, and will arrive there this week from Washington. Their children are already there.

The first week of the Saturday evening dances at the Bar Harbor Swimming Club was held last week. Among the distinguished people there were Mrs. Cortland S. Van Rensselaer and Cortland S. Van Rensselaer, Jr.

Commander Christopher Rodgers (U. S. N. and Mrs. Rodgers (Alice Meyer) who are at Santa Barbara, California, have taken one of the cottages belonging to the Mirimar Hotel Colony and will not come East this Summer. Mrs. Rodger's mother, Mrs. George von L. Meyer, has sailed from Rome and is due to reach her Hamilton estate the later part of July. She has been visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Signor and Signora Brambrilla (Julia Meyer), at their home in Italy.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Winslow of Commonwealth avenue have returned to this country after an extended stay abroad. During their trip they visited France, Spain and England.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wheatland, with their three daughters and two sons, have gone from their country home at Topsfield to remain in Europe for the remainder of the Summer. The Wheatlands will stop first at Scotland.

Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney of New York, who have rented the Cochrane cottage at Pride's Crossing, have arrived there for the Summer. Erly in the season the cottage was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Sears, who are at Dark Harbor until September, when they will return and occupy their town house at No. 232 Beacon street for the Winter.

Four members of Harvard, '21 who have recently sailed for Europe are J. Reed Morse, E. Jackson, Alfred Douglass and Charles Butterfield, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Vaughan of Boston are visiting Mrs. Vaughan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus P. Loring at Pride's Crossing. Later in the month Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan, with their children, are planning to go to Bartlett's Island, off the Maine coast, where the Lorings have a place.

AMERICA SOON TO BE SAHARA, SAYS HAYNES

Dry Commissioner Relies on Efficiency to Do "Whale of a Job"

By International News Service.

Washington, July 14.—Roy C. Haynes, prohibition commissioner, after a month in office, prophesied today that the United States would be a literal Sahara under a plan he has evolved to centre all responsibility for enforcement in State directors.

Commissioner Haynes admitted that the task before him is a "whale of a job," but he believed he is equal to it, and through greater efficiency, which he aims to establish, he predicted that all the liquor "leaks" will be closed, that liquor lawlessness will gradually subside and that public sentiment will become more strongly crystalized in favor of rigid enforcement.

Reminded of the prediction of his predecessor that the United States would not be dry for 100 years, Haynes said that in the future enforcement work will not be characterized by the "and mistakes" made in the first year of the prohibition experiment, and that he is confident of stamping out the illegal liquor traffic.

By banishing politics from his organization, Haynes expects to inject greater efficiency. Politics, he said, now is delaying his program through the wrangling over aspirants for the big jobs. He is determined to clear the air of this difficulty by filling vacancies at once.

TUG IS CRIPPLED AS BARGE SINKS IN FOG

Newport, R. I., July 14.—The tug Larnie B. Shaw, bound from Forest Island to New York with a barge of crushed stone in tow, entered Newport harbor with a hole stove in her port side and all pumps and a bucket brigade working desperately to keep her afloat.

The tug and the barge struck the rocks at Point Judith in a dense fog, with the result that the tug was crippled and the barge foundered and sank immediately.

"Doc Smith" Gives the Real "Dope" on Big Storm

IF you don't like the weather.

IF you have a twinge in your shoulder and your pet corn aches.

IF your favorite "oldest inhabitant" tells you he never saw so much rain nor so much lightning or heard so much thunder.

DON'T blame the icebergs off the Newfoundland coast.

DON'T blame the cosmic dust.

DON'T blame sun spots.

DON'T blame forest fires in Canada.

DON'T blame any misbehaving comet.

BECAUSE the recent six inches of rain in twenty-four hours and the heavy fogs and otherwise disagreeable weather is due to something entirely diffirent.

Who says so?

Old Doctor Smith, who has been keeping a "weather eye" on New England weather for thirty-three years and ought to know.

"How about this weather you're giving us, Mister, taint right," said the reporter searching out the kindly old weather expert in his office in the Postoffice tower.

"LOTS OF IT."

"Well what's wrong with this weather? There is lots of it," answered the weather man, unlocking his desk where he keeps next week's weather, and sorting out the papers.

"Now that they have ceased cannonading in Ireland for a spell it will probably clear up here, don't you think?" ventured the reporter.

"No, but if the wind changes it may," answered the weather doctor with a smile.

"Differences in temperature between the cold moist air blowing in from the ocean and meeting the warm dry air has caused the recent excessive rainfall," declared Mr. Smith.

LIKE SQUEEZING SPONGE.

"When the hot air met the moist cold air it was just like a hand squeezing a damp sponge. Result, rain and cold weather.

"Forest fires in Canada have caused the hazy appearance of the sun, but would have nothing whatever to do with our rainfall.

"To assert that cosmic dust, sun spots or comets' tails are responsible for our present unusual weather conditions presupposes that our weather conditions are national instead of being purely local.

"Northern New England is still suffering from excessive dry weather and is in danger of forest fires. Our weather conditions prevail within a radius of perhaps one hundred miles.

"Air pressures vary, causing changes in temperature and always moving in an easterly direction.

STORMS HUG COAST.

"Due to coast formation and a number of other causes storms seem to linger along the North Atlantic Coast longer than in some localities. Shifting winds will bring a change in temperature."

"How long will this unusual weather last?"

"Well, we have had quite a spell of bad weather. Now we should have some good," drawled the Weatherman, feeling the pulse of a tender looking machine.

Record Boston Rainfall During July 1 to 9

According to figures given by the weather bureau the total rainfall in Boston from July 1 to July 9 was 7.58 inches.

On Saturday, July 9, 6.04 inches fell, the greatest amount in any 24-hour period since 1871.

The longest period of uninterrupted rainfall in the nine days occurred on July 9, when the deluge lasted from 11:40 a. m. until 12 midnight; twelve hours and twenty minutes.

The two storms of Saturday, July 9, covered seventeen hours and twenty-three minutes, but were split up into two periods, lasting from 12:55 a. m. until 12 noon, and from 6:02 p. m. until 11:20 p. m.

JAPAN ACCEPTS DISARMAMENT INVITATION

Fails to Announce Willingness to Join in Far Eastern Parfley, However

By International News Service.

Washington, July 14.—Japan has informed the United States that she will be "happy to participate in a disarmament conference at Washington," but failed to announce her willingness to participate in a conference concerning Far Eastern policy, it was announced at the State Department today.

China has also informed the United States of her acceptance of the invitation extended by President Harding to attend the proposed conference.

It was emphasized by officials that Japan had not expressed an unwillingness to participate in discussions of Far Eastern problems, but the fact remained that the acceptance applied only to a disarmament conference. Officials have by no means given up hope that Japan will eventually agree to accept President Harding's invitation without reservation.

The acceptance of China had been anticipated from the start and whatever delay had occurred was attributed rather to difficulty of communication than to any reluctance on the part of the Chinese to accept.

EAST BOSTON BLAZE DRIVES FAMILY OUT

The blaze started in the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Store on the ground floor and was spreading through an air shaft to the apartment on the second floor occupied by the Luppa family when discovered. The damage was estimated at $2,000.

Boston Girl Regains Sight at Denver Church Service

Miss Esther Bacon, a Boston girl who has been blind for years, has recovered her sight at healing services at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, Denver, according to information reaching Boston.

The girl sought aid for blindness while in Denver visiting friends. Rev. Robert B. H. Bell, rector of the church, and Rev. Charles Brady, rector of St. Barnabas' Church, anointed her with oil and prayed for her sight.

Returning to her seat, Miss Bacon declared that she could faintly see the cross on the altar. Later she was able to read fine print on the poor box of the church, and finally her normal sight was restored.

BERLIN PUZZLED OVER STANDING WITH U. S.

Germany Fails to Understand Delay in Official Notification on Congress Action

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND.
(Staff Correspondent of Boston American.)

Berlin, July 14.—Does peace exist between America and Germany? If not what is the status of the relations between the two countries now that the state of war is formally ended with peace not reestablished?

These are the questions which are causing a headache in Germany governmental circles.

If Washington can answer the puzzle it would afford much relief to German officialdom.

It is frankly declared in Wilhelmstrasse that the present situation is not understood here. The officials are unable to grasp why no official notification has been received of the action of Congress ending the state of war.

There is keen disappointment that nothing further has been done since the adoption of the resolution.

There is a growig impression that the American government is using the idea of a separate agreement for peace with Germany to force France and England to make concessions on other points to America.

ACCUSED OF LARCENY OF $848 IN GOLD

Samuel Goldetz, thirty-nine years old, of North Shore road, Revere, was arrested by police officers of Station 4 charged with the larceny of $848.37 in gold, the property of Sigmund M. Hanter, No. 165 Tremont street. The gold is used by Hanter for dental supplies and Goldetz, who worked for Hanter, is alleged to have committed the theft May 27.

Walter Jones of Dorchester recently found a new automobile tire valued at $60 which belonged to Josiah Babcack of Milton, which was returned by Mr. Jones, seeing Mr. Babcock's ad in the papers. The captain says he would greatly appreciate it if the loss or finding of property be reported to him.

CITIES JOIN IN FIGHTING HIGH EDISON RATES

Public Hearing, July 20, to Probe Charge of Alleged Discrimination

Corporation Counsel Arthur D. Hill announces that thirty-eight cities and towns have been asked to join with the city of Boston in the action against the Edison Electric Illuminating Company, alleging unreasonable and discriminatory charges, which comes up for a hearing before the State Department of Public Utilities at the State House on July 20 at 10:30 a. m.

Twelve cities and towns already have signified their intention of participating in the hearings. Mr. Hill, in his letter to the city and town officials, pointed out the importance of being represented by counsel and of appropriating funds to help carry on the fight.

CALL FOR BOOK PROBE.

Grenville S. CacFarland, counsel for the Boston American, assisted by Maurice Palais, will represent the interests of individual consumers and, in their behalf, have entered petitions for a thorough investigation of the books and a public hearing for the purpose of securing reduced rates and more efficient service.

"The position of the city," Corporation Counsel Hill explains, "is that there is reason to believe that the Edison Company is earning a great deal of money and that the rates which the company is charging are discriminatory as between different classes of consumers.

"The city further questions the right of the Edison Company to impose a coal clause and the 10 per cent. additional charge exacted. There is a request for arbitration pending between the city and the Edison Company under the contract for street lighting.

"Technical experts have been employed and accountants have been going over the books of the company and it is the hope of the city law department to obtain a substantial reduction in the rates charged for electricity and a better adjustment of rates between the different classes of consumers.

"We have $50,000 from the city to prosecute the case, with asurance that more will be forthcoming if necesary. We are determined to push the case until the rates of the Edison Company are established on a basis which will be fair alike to the company and the communities which it serves."

PLAN OF INQUIRY.

The plan of the inquiry, as outlined by the corporation counsel, is as follows:

1—Determination of total income which the company ought reasonably to receive, involving the following elements: Fair value of the property which is used and useful in the conduct of the business; fair rate of return on the fair value of the property; amount of money produced by this fair rate of return; annual amount necessary for operating expenses; annual amount necessary for depreciation; whether the sum total received is more than the service is reasonably worth.

2—Criticism and analysis of the methods now used by the Edison Company in obtaining their income, including the rate structure and the rate practices. The specific items which will be gone into in these connections are: Discrimination as produced by the present system of differential rates; the coal clause, the 10 per cent. surcharge.

3—Consideration of whether or not a simpler and more equitable system of rates can be devised which will produce the income required, including rates for commercial lighting, street lighting, power, rates to street railways and other companies and future development of the Edison Company's business.

Just Apply This Paste and the Hairs Will Vanish

(Boudoir Secrets)

The judicious use of a delatone paste insures any woman a clear, hairless skin. To prepare the paste, mix a little of the powdered delatone with some water, then apply to the objectionable hairs for two or three minutes. When the paste is removed, and the skin washed, every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain attends the use of the delatone and it will not mar the most sensitive skin, but to insure results, see that you get real delatone.—Advertisement.

LAWRENCE MAN BADLY HURT IN 40-FOOT FALL

Lawrence, July 14.—Frank Penny, twenty-eight years old, of No. 60 Holly street, this city, suffered serious injuries while at his duties as electrical worker in the employ of a Lawrence contractor in the Everett mill yard. He may have suffered internal injuries in addition to burns he received when his hand came in contact with a 600 volt live wire. He fell forty feet from a suspended carrier on which he was at work when the shock dislodged him. He was removed to his home in a semi-conscious condition, following first aid treatment at the mill.

WHOLE WORLD IS TENDING TO BECOME DRY

Hapgood Finds Reaction in Favor of Liquor Restrictions in Many Foreign Lands

By NORMAN HAPGOOD

Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.

NORMAN HAPGOOD

Washington, July 14.—While the wet forces in this country have been making a perfectly futile attempt to weaken the meaning of the prohibition amendment, the tendency all over the world has been in the direction of restricting the liquor traffic.

While I was in Denmark, in 1919, an exasperated old Russian Princess was commenting on the fact that the United States had gone over to prohibition. "Where will this Bolshevism lead us next?" she asked.

Taken literally, of course, her history was all wrong. The first country to go dry was Russia, but it was the Russia of the Tsar. Vodka was destroying the peasant so obviously that even the far from intelligent monarch made up his mind that he must act. She merely expressed loosely the prevailing exasperation of her class.

In an editorial a fortnight or so ago Mr. Hearst referred to the superstition that drunkenness is rare in drinking countries. My studies abroad thoroughly back up his conclusions.

FRANCE MOST ALCOHOLIC.

From childhood I have been brought up on the formula that France is a temperate country. I believed it until I studied the figures. Now when I hear the words I am ready to insure myself in any company that will protect me from ever hearing them again.

France today is more alcoholic than any other country on the continent of Europe. Her leading thinkers are thoroughly alarmed in consequence. The temperance movement there is well led and based on statistics. It progresses slowly because of the unbelievable hold of the liquor interests on the politicians.

The expressions about French temperance were true once. The change began about eighty years ago. The increase in alcoholism has been particularly rapid since 1871.

TEMPERATE SCANDINAVIA.

Eighty years ago the most alcoholic part of Europe was Scandinavia. Attempts to control the consumption of alcohol have been successful enough to give the Scandinavian countries as a whole a decidedly good standing for temperance today.

Sweden led with her famous Gotinberg system, not unlike the system made familiar by the war for bread and sugar. Recently Sweden has altered this system.

Do not become encouraged, O, you cheerful drinkers. She has altered it by strengthening it in detail.

Another thing happened to me in 1919. A lot of people passed through Copenhagen, where I was stationed, on their way from Norway. Practically without exception they assured me that the approaching referendum on the liquor question would result in the overwhelming repeal of the restrictions. As a matter of fact the referendum, when it came, supported the liquor laws by a vote of three to one.

SITUATION IN BRITAIN.

Great Britain is a special case. Some of the war restrictions still exist and Britain is far more temperate than she was in 1914. The political contest is by no means over. Two factors affect it that counted little here.

The unions are much more powerful than they are with us, and they are determined to except beer from any legislation.

The British property sense is deep-seated and the temperance question is mixed up with the question of whether the brewers and distillers shall be compensated for their losses.

Of course Canada interests us more, on this subject, than any other country, on account of smuggling across the border. Ontario, the largest and wealthiest of the provinces, has gone for prohibition by a large majority.

MONTREAL STAYS "WET."

In Quebec the prohibition law has been a failure on account of the city of Montreal. In that city the sentiment is overwhelmingly against the law. Also there is a great profit in illicit trade because it is the headquarters for the bootleggers and motor speculators who carry liquor to the United States. One doctor issued four thousand liquor prescriptions in 1920.

So the law in the Province of Quebec is probably going to be changed. But again I hope the drink fans will not be too cheerful when they read this. The proposed plan is for the government to become the only importer and the only seller. So that it can enforce the law.

The gist of this article is that, if we look at the world as a whole, so far from there being a reaction away from restrictions on the drink habit, there is a strong and easily discernible movement to limit or end the traffic.

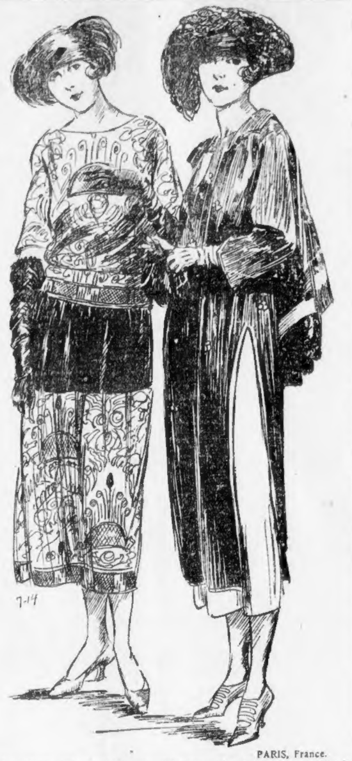
—Fresh From Paris—



PARIS, France.

IN contrast with the black and white crepe that has been so widely in favor, a frock of black and white satin, seen at the Chantilly races, is refreshingly different. The short-sleeved white satin bodice forms a girdle over the black satin skirt, and both the bodice and the lower part of the skirt, which is also of white satin, are strikingly embroidered in black. Black uncurled ostrich trims the black satin hat.

THE frock with cape attached is a pleasing variation of the three-piece tailleur, and both these modes, although having attained wide popularity during the Summer season, are expected to continue smart for Autumn. French blue Canton crepe makes the underskirt and bands the tunic and full crepe of the midnight blue serge frock sketched at the right. The embroidered motifs are of the lighter blue, and it is interesting to note that advance Autumn models from the Parisian couturiers presage the use of much embroidery for both frocks and tailleurs. A wide band of uncurled ostrich feathers outlines the brim of this hat and continues below it at one side.

COMPTROLLER URGES WORLD CREDIT PLAN

Would Put International Trade on Firm Basis, Says Crissinger

Cleveland, July 14.—Declaring that a sound basis for international trade and exchange was the prime necessity for world economic revival, D. R. Crissinger, comptroller of the currency, proposed to the Ohio State Bankers' Association in convention here today that the world's gold be used to establish an international credit system so as to "prevent those violent fluctuations in exchange which render so dangerously uncertain all process of trade."

"We would make a better use of the gold resources which we possess, if we would use them first to establish a firm, secure and adequate gold basis for international commerce," he said.

Crissinger answered critics of the plan, who assert it would further inflate currencies of the various nations. He admitted inflation probably would result, but at the same time, he said, international trade would be put on a "firm and onfidene-insvirineg basis," and that "would be doing better with the gold than we are now doing."

The trouble with monetary systems now, he said is that gold has been heaped up in too great piles in a few nations, especially the United States, and the nominal gold standard of other countries has almost disappeared. He said he believed an international gold credit, would enable, by getting world trade re-started, the poorer nations eventually to return to a gold standard.

BOSTON WOMAN PICKPOCKET IN TOILS AGAIN

Mrs. Virginia Calnan, Convicted in New York as Shoplifter, Gets Three Years

New York, July 14.—Mrs. Virginia C. Calnan, of Medford, Mass., and who one time lived in Dorchester, who has been arrested and convicted oftener than any other woman in the country, and is known from coast to coast as the "queen of shoplifters and pickpockets," was sentenced to the House of Good Shepherd here for three years.

BIG ULCER ALL HEALED

"Now I Can Walk," Says Mrs. Southcott of Medina

"Here is another letter that makes me happy," says Peterson, of Buffalo. "One that I would rather have than a thousand dollars."

"Money isn't everything in this world. There is many a big-hearted, rich man who would give all he has on earth to be able to produce a remedy with such mighty healing power as Peterson's Ointment, to sell at all druggists for 35 cents a large box."

Read this letter, written February 14, 1918, by Mrs. Albert Southcott, of Medina, N. Y. It seems like a miracle, but it is true, every word of it.

I know it because I get similar letters almost every day from people who have used my ointment for old sores, eczema and piles.

Is it any wonder I am happy!

Peterson Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

Dear Sirs:—

"I was an untold sufferer from an old running sore and ulcers. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain. A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had not left me before in years, and after using just nine dollars worth of the salve I am cured. The ulcer was 9 inches by 6½ inches, is all healed and I can walk. Never, never will I be without Peterson's again.

"You may use this to recommend your ointment if you wish. I cannot say enough to praise it." Yours truly, Mrs. Albert Southcott, Medina, N. Y. Mail orders filled by Peterson Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.—Advertisement.

LAW WAIVED TO LET 60-YEAR-OLD COUPLE MARRY

Minneapolis Widower With 9 Children Weds Woman Who Has Had 2 Husbands

A romance which begun in Minneapolis several months ago has bloomed anew in Boston. The groom is sixty years old and the bride admits the same number of years. His name is William Anderson and her's was Anna Lenora Hays.

Wednesday afternoon they called at the office of the registrar of births and marriages in City Hall and declared their marriage intentions. Having signed the necessary papers they were informed of the five-day marriage law.

MRS. ANNA HAYS

From the City Hall they wended their way to the Central Municipal Court to ask the waiving of the delay. They told their love story to Judge Joseph A. Sheehan. He explained that the law was being strictly enforced, but he softened when the groom told him the facts.

The lady of Anderson's choice has been visiting in the East and he came on to join her here so that they might be married, and he visit his brother, Charles Anderson of No. 88 Morrison avenue, Somerville.

Ignorance of the law, it seemed, was going to spoil their plans, until Judge Sheehan gave them permission to wed.

Mr. Anderson was married once before, but has been a widower for several years. This is the third matrimonial venture for the bride. He has nine children and she has none.

FRAMINGHAM MOTHER IS KILLED BY TRAIN

Framingham, July 14.—Mrs. Dominick Sileno, twenty-five, of No. 78 Beaver street, was ground to death under the wheels of a Boston & Albany train when she dodged under the crossing gate near the Dennison Manufacturing Company here and started across the railroad tracks in the rear of an east-bound freight train. She was the mother of three children.

TARIFF MEASURE DEFENDED BY TREADWAY

Massachusetts Representative Deplores Inactivity of Cotton Mills in State

Washington, July 14—The Fordney tariff bill was framed to secure "workers employment and prosperity," declared Representative Treadway of Massachusetts in a speech in the House today.

"The interests of the Democratic party are evidently with foreign manufacturers, judging by their solicitude for the sale of foreign goods in this country," he said. "The Republican party is solicitous of home industry and the employment of American labor."

"Fall River and New Bedford are two of the great industrial centres of Massachusetts. In both places more people are seeking aid from the pauper department than ever before. In Fall River, the local pauper department is spending $20,000 per month and in New Bedford $40,000 a month.

"As the cotton mills are likely to shut down entirely by August 1, these conditions promise to grow worse.

"Recent word from Tokyo is to the effect that Japan is operating 350,000 cotton spindles on goods to be sent to this country, supplanting those which should be made by the labor of men and women now asking alms of the cities of Fall River and New Bedford."

Rain Tomorrow May Mean 40 Days More of Wet Weather

Tomorrow is St. Swithin's Day and, according to tradition, if it rains New England can settle down for forty days of rainy weather. Should the sun decide to shine, then for the same period the weather will remain fair.

The Weather Bureau, however, does not believe in the old tradition. According to the local forecaster the conditions for the forty days following St. Swithin's Day are not governed by whether it rains or shines on July 15.

PATROLMEN ARE CLEARED OF ASSAULT

Men They Arrested Guilty—Man Spared From Jail for Wife's Sake

Warrants were refused by Judge Cohen in Municipal Court today for the arrest of Patrolmen Phillip Schuman and Walter Donovan of the Joy Street Station, charging them with assault and battery on Thomas H. Conroy, his wife Mary, and their three-year-old son, Thomas H., Jr.

In the same court, after a trial which lasted five days, Anthony Conners and Thomas H. Conroy, Sr., of the West End, were found guilty of profanity and assault and battery on police officers. The profanity charges went on file. Conroy was given one year suspended sentence from the House of Correction on the assault charge, while Conners went on probation to June 11, 1922, having an additional charge against him of intent to rescue a prisoner.

After sentence was imposed, Judge Cohen stated that the officers used no more force than necessary and acted within their legal rights.

Conroy was reprimanded for attempting to protect himself at the time of arrest by holding Thomas, Jr., in front of him, when confronted by the officers. A high tribute was paid Mrs. Conroy, Judge Conroy announcing that for her and the baby's sake he would suspend Conroy's sentence.

Mr. FitzGerald, who is 75 years old, was found in an abandoned cabin, twenty-five miles from the nearest hotel, by a searching party headed by Frederick Law Olmstead, prominent Brookline landscape architect.

With a forest ranger, Mr. FitzGerald had walked nine miles through the dense woods after being thrown out of a boat on Lake Yellowstone in one of the worst storms ever experienced there.

By International News Service.

Chicago, July 14.—Mrs. Etta Perry Heil, wife of a wealthy broker, whose arrest several weeks ago as a woman "Raffles" caused a sensation, is in a serious condition at a hospital here today, after an attempt at suicide. Mrs. Heil swallowed poison in the waiting room of a railway station.

Earlier in the week, Mrs. Heil made an unsuccessful attempt to kidnap her two children, who have been in the custody of their father, Joseph P. Heil, since her arrest for looting the homes of wealthy residents where she had obtained employment as a maid.

TOO FAT

Insufficient discharge of a gland secretion causes obesity. Most everything you eat turns to fat. Appetite is perverted. Phy-thy-rin is a substitute for your own gland secretion, and also tends to correct perverted appetite. It stops formation of abnormal fat, dissolves and eliminates most of the surplus fat that makes you so uncomfortable and ungainly. Thousands have safely used in past ten years with satisfactory results. Lose from five to seven pounds a week, by asking any good druggist for 5 grain Phy-thy-rin tablets. Price $1.00—six for $5.00.

Filene's

THE GILET

Store closed all day Saturday

(pronounced "ji-lay")

--the new waistcoat-blouse
--first at Filene's in Boston
(and probably in America)

Last week Filene's offered Boston women a startlingly new style—the gilet. Like a flash it caught public fancy—and we've been re-ordering ever since.

It's a practical idea, you know, this idea of a blouse with a front like a man's waist coat. It's equally becoming to slim or stout women.

And (we whisper it) that draw-string in back that pulls in the waist-line, seems to presage diminishing inches in fashionable waist measures.

The blouse sketched is baronet satin with georgette—a chance for charming contrasts. White georgette with gold, orchid, or jade baronet, $8.75.

Other gilets in voile, figured sateen, crepe de Chine or taffeta, $4 to $12.75.

Filene's—mail orders filled—fourth and fifth floors

An interesting markdown of Filene Grace corsets

All good styles and fine materials. The reason for their low prices is the fact that we are not replacing these styles. The markdowns:

Were $5.50, now $4

63 Grace Corsets, No. 378—pink brocade, low top, 6 hose supporters, lace trimmed,
Were $5.50, now $4

77 Grace Corsets, No. 93—pink batiste, front lace, very low top, lace trimmed, elastic section at bottom of back, sizes 21 to 28,
Were $5, now $3

IN ADDITION — 397 corsets that were $2.50 to $20, now $1.50 to $15. Many at $1.50 and $5.

40 MORE AUTOISTS UNDER GOODWIN'S BAN; TOTAL SINCE JAN. 1 1,383

The licenses of 1,383 motor-vehicle operators have been revoked and suspended this year in the aggressive campaign to stem the death wave on the roads.

The list to July 1 includes 842 suspensions and 541 revocations. That does not include the unlicensed auto-law violators, whose right to operate has been taken away.

An indication of the severity of State Registrar Goodwin's crusade is gained from the fact that practically two licenses have been taken away for every one revoked or suspended last year, which had been a remarkable year for severe punishment. The total last year was 658 at this time.

Goodwin today revoked and suspended forty operators, the second time he has reached that high mark this year. The day's list and the violations charged is as follows:

ACCUSES HUGHES OF BLOCKING RUSSIAN DEAL

Vanderlip Says U. S. Lost the Chance of $200,000,000 Trade Exchange

San Francisco, July 14.—The opportunity to import into the United States $200,000,000 worth of flax, wool, hides, furs and other raw materials from Russia, and in turn to ship to that country an equal value of American manufactured goods was blocked by Secretary of State Hughes last May, [illegible] according to Washington D. Vanderlip.

The man who, a few brief months ago, sprang into the limelight through the enormous concessions granted him in Russia and Siberia by the Soviet government has been in San Francisco for several days. His wife has been in a hospital in this city for several months. Their home is in Los Angeles.

HUGHES IGNORED CABLE.

Prepared, he says, to prove false the statement of Secretary Hughes that Russia today is an economic vacuum—a statement contained in the note last May that rejected the Soviet offer of resumption of trade relations—Vanderlip declares that he cabled the State Department on May 18, announcing that the Soviet government was willing to grant him a credit for millions of dollars of raw material.

He says he informed Secretary Hughes that this material could be shipped in American bottoms and that he required permission to bring to America a staff of Russian representatives to aid him in importing and to control the Russian interests in the enterprise. This cable, Vanderlip asserted, was utterly ignored.

Here is his story:

"When the Hughes' note was received in Moscow last May rejecting the proposals for the resumption of trade relations, and declaring among other things, that Russia was an economic vacuum, I conceived the plan of purchasing [illegible] quantities of Russian raw materials, shipping them immediately to America, and with the money secured from their sale purchasing cotton, foodstuffs and manufacturing articles so badly needed, and bringing them back to Russia.

GIVEN $200,000,000 CREDIT.

"I laid the plan before the Soviet Council which, after a conference lasting a week, agreed to take my notes for $200,000,000 and even more if necessary, to enable me at once to put the plan into execution. There were at that time more than 150 American ships lying idle in Baltic ports and in the harbors of France and England and I proposed to use them. I went to Reval, and through the American consul there sent the cable to Hughes on May 18, 19[illegible].

"There never was any reply to the message. In my opinion Hughes ignored it because its very essence disproved his assertion that Russia is an 'economic vacuum.'"

ALLEN LAUDS WORK OF CREDIT UNION

Allen congratulating the State employes on their success since organization a few months ago. [illegible] to the recent and first examination of [illegible] affairs by this department I desire to congratulate [illegible] start [illegible] with continued efforts [illegible] this union [illegible] develop and become one of the leading credit unions of the Commonwealth."

SPANISH DANCER TAKES BOSTON BY STORM

Nita Bilbainita Graceful as a Bird in Dainty Act at Keith's Theatre

By FRED J. McISAAC
Dramatic Editor

A mite of a girl, with blue black hair and magic feet whose knowledge of English is confined to the first three lessons in a grammar she studies in her dressing room, is occupying the position of honor on Keith's bill this week.

She came here Monday unknown and unheralded. Her sensational success and the alertness of the management to take advantage of it swept the regular headliners of the week, Lean and Mayfield, out of the theatre in a fury. And Nita Bilbainita, the little Spanish dancer has moved up to their position.

REAL SPANISH COSTUMES.

Now here's the remarkable thing about Nita Bilbainita. She has the least pretentious Spanish dancing act that I have seen in this country. Her stage settings are cheap, even tawdry. Her costumes are actual Spanish peasant costumes, not glittering and bespangled. There is nothing of the brazen, daring effrontery of the regulation Spanish dancer as we know her in America. You are familiar with the type clad in a gold skintight robe revealing every line of the figure, and usually bare in the back from the waist up.

Hardly a young woman walking up Tremont street but reveals more of her limbs and shoulders than Nati Bilbainita.

On the other hand she is as beautiful and as tiny as a doll. She is as graceful as a bird and she dances actual Spanish dances, country dances, which most of her countrywomen didn't consider exciting enough to import for the edification of Americans. And it speaks well for the discrimination of Boston audiences that they recognize the sincerity and charm of her dancing and applaud her wildly.

BOSTON KIND TO HER.

Senorita Bilbainita was sitting on a high legged stool in front of her dressing table when I met her. She was still breathless from her dancing. She speaks no English and neither does her parents nor her musical conductor, and the interview was conducted in halting Spanish.

"Oh this Boston, how it has been nice to me," exclaimed Senorita Nati. "I have danced in some other theatres [illegible] but there they like the best. My little dances they are [illegible] sensational. I do not smoke the cigarette, or bang the tambourine, or wear the dress so short it is no dress.

"In Spain we do not dance that way. I think what you call the Spanish dance is part Paris and part Broadway. In Madrid those dancers they would be walked off to jail because we are a [illegible] people we of Spain." She laughed gleefully.

"The first manager who see me he say 'where is ze pep?' He thinks it is no good. But when the public see me it likes me. Then he likes me [illegible]

WATER FLIERS! Ethelda Bleibtrey (left), and Charlotte Boyle, the two fastest women swimmers in the world, who will meet Saturday in a special handicap sprint at the Brighton Beach pool. Both have met many times, but Miss Bleibtrey has generally won by a fraction. (W. W.)

FIRST AID. Any means or methods to save a life nowadays. This theory has resulted in the bringing into use of the seaplane as an agency for rescuing drowning persons. In the North Sea and on the coast of Germany these big sea fliers cruise about with their engines running, ready to dash to the rescue of some unskilled bather. In the event that the rescued person is almost dead, the flier, who serves in the capacity of life guard, places the victim on the top of the machine and gives first aid treatment, as shown in the photo above. Scores of lives have been saved by this method. (W. W.)

AS TO LISTS OF TITLES.

There may be four hundred or five hundred titles to choose from today, because these are ALL the titles that have been printed from the beginning. There are thirty-one Correct Titles among them. But the List of Titles may be changed at any time. It may be long or short. It may be no longer than the [illegible] under today's picture [illegible] may be many times longer.

When all is said and done [illegible] know, this IS a [illegible] test of skill and [illegible] the artist will do [illegible] you. He guarantees, of course, that it is "possible" to find and write the 60 [illegible] that [illegible] that challenge [illegible] know now [illegible] paid. $6,000 will [illegible] the Boston [illegible] highest score prove [illegible] than 40.

You have nothing [illegible] is wide open to every [illegible] take part [illegible] Boston American [illegible] have access every day to the Boston American of a friend or neighbor. We [illegible] Pictures will be [illegible] clipped from the paper. [illegible] may be made [illegible] best and easiest [illegible] by using tracing paper.

GET WHOLE FAMILY IN.

All the members of the family may take part in the Test and each send in a parcel of sixty Pictures but only [illegible] family.

You may find it difficult to write the title in ink on newsprint paper. The short line of these reprints may be another annoyance. Never mind [illegible] paper of a better grade. If you prefer use a note book. Disregard the little coupon [illegible] are asked to write title, name, address, etc., but be careful to write, under the "transplanted" picture, all the information called for on the coupon.

There remains but one or two observations more.

If you enter the Test, bring your own sunshine. It IS a Test. Thousands are taking part in it and enjoying it. There is $6,000 waiting here to be distributed among the 220 leaders. There is NOT an award for everybody. Do your best, assured of a fair field and no favors, but if you fail to land among the 220 be prepared to accept the situation good naturedly.

There will not be another printing of Back Pictures. Today's is positively the last. From this point on you must depend upon the newsdealer. Make certain that HE understands that YOU are to have the Boston American EVERY DAY. Back Numbers of the paper, remember, CANNOT be obtained from this office. Take no chances! Place a standing order for the paper NOW!

You do not have to "enroll" in the Test. Begin to find and write titles and you are a "member." It is not necessary to notify us that you are taking part. You pay no fee of any kind whatever.

Come in whatever your age, business or place of address, do the best you know how, and may the best 220 of you win!

Test Picture No. 32 will be printed tomorrow. After that ONE Test Picture daily to the end.

An Opportunity for a Heart-to-Heart Talk With 100,000 Housewives

The first eight days of October will mark what is, perhaps, the greatest opportunity manufacturers have ever had to talk, face to face, with at least 100,000 Chicago housewives—at Chicago's First Annual Food and Household Appliance Exposition to be held at the Coliseum.

If yours is a product of merit for use in the home, then you might well take advantage of this opportunity. For the thousands of women who will turn interested eyes upon your product will not only sell themselves upon its use, but will carry the story of your merchandise into homes you might otherwise never reach. Here is an opportunity to build business in the market of markets. As a means of increasing returns from your advertising it is incomparable—a friendly get-together of consumer and manufacturer, whereby the interests of both can be shown to be kindred.

The purpose of the Food and Household Appliance Exposition is to make the home a place of beauty and comfort—to make home life more pleasant and enjoyable. Directed by the Chicago Herald and Examiner, the Exposition will have the co-operation of all the leading women's organizations of Chicago, whose enthusiastic support assures a tremendous success for the enterprise. These women's organizations will furnish exhibits on subjects such as art, literature, domestic science, sanitation, health. Ten thousand feet of floor space will be occupied by the exhibits of these women's organizations.

What an opportunity for the alert manufacturer! Can you really afford not to be represented at this gigantic meeting of the wives and daughters of Chicago?

For complete information regarding floor space address the Food and Household Appliance Exposition, Chicago Herald and Examiner, Room 201 Hearst Building, Chicago.

BRAVES PUTTING UP REAL PENNANT BRAND OF BASEBALL

By NICK FLATLEY

The Battling Braves, having won [illegible] in a row, were ready this afternoon to take on the Cubs in another game, and put the results away [illegible] the easiest thing the real athlete [illegible] at the Wigwam [illegible] can blame them for having plenty of [illegible]

Those Cubs linger around for a couple more games and the Braves, fighting and hopeful, should get at least an even break. Having won three, a split of the next two will put the Mitchmen just a bit closer to the Pirates and Giants.

The Braves convinced the large assemblage that they are a mighty tough club to lick. Both times they came out from behind, although the hostile margin was only one run, which is nothing in the lives of the Mitchmen.

While the pitching was not perhaps up to the standard of the last few days the athletes supported both flingers splendidly, and kept the crowd howling by removing Scott and Lily from the well known hole.

Pinch hitter Babe Twombley banged a hot one directly over third and in some unknown manner Antonio lunged back and out and halted the agate. He recovered it in time to scramble back and tag third, which ended the riot.

We disliked to injure again the feelings of our caller, but we could do naught but remark that the point of his utterance either was much too vague or far too clever for us to appreciate.

"'At Bein'—groomed line what yer pulled yerself, ain't bad either," Fugg volunteered. "Some little groomers dey're linin' up fer him. Johnson, Wills, Gibbons, Fulton an' a few more. Dey're li'ble fer groom him so much dey'll polish him off before dey can pull de go wit' Dempsey."

WILSON-ROBINSON BOUT WILL PROVE MAGNET

By JACK CONWAY

Ten thousand persons will see [illegible] world's middleweight champion [illegible] Arena A. C. show tomorrow night. [illegible] by the capacity of the Boston Arena.

[illegible] The fans are eager to see just how [illegible] fighter Wilson is when pitted against a man who is capable of giving him an even battle.

* * *

Wilson and Robinson completed their training today. Neither boxer planned to do any heavy work as they are already at the required poundage of 158 pounds.

Robinson says he will enter the ring strong despite the fact that he will be fighting at a lower poundage than he has at any time in recent years. The Cambridge warrior says he has usually scaled at 162 pounds and that it has not been much of an effort for him to reduce to 158 pounds.

As for Wilson, he was at 156 pounds for his first bout for O'Dowd and at 150 pounds for his second meeting with the St. Paul favorite. The champion says that all challengers will have to enter the ring at between 158 and 160 pounds as he has not any desire to clash with light-heavyweights.

* * *

* * *

Jim MacDonald, manager of Robinson, has made all kinds of caustic remarks about the battling qualities of Wilson. These attacks caused Marty Killilea, manager of the champion, to see "red." The present match resulted from one of the torrid arguments between MacDonald and Killilea.

* * *

Secretary Bill [illegible] charge of the Arena A. C.'s office at Room 15, No. 28 [illegible] street, declared today that the [illegible] more than half sold out and [illegible] sale today and tomorrow would probably mean a capacity crowd.

* * *

Tony [illegible] manager of [illegible] Doyle made a few very forceful remarks today. Said Tony:

"Larry Conley and George Carter are trying to get some cheap publicity for Nate Siegal when they deny Paul Doyle's claim to the New England welterweight title on the ground that Doyle is a non-resident. Doyle has lived in Boston for three years, having resided on St. Botolph street and on Huntington avenue most of this time.

"Doyle has also done virtually all of his fighting in New England rings. He really should have been the welterweight champion after his fight with Kloby when he won by a comfortable margin. Doyle has battled Kevlin, Siegal, Bogash and every other challenger. He has always given a good account of himself. As champion he will continue a drawing popular champion as he fears no man who can make 144 pounds. This is the weight at which Doyle beat Siegal, who incidentally entered the ring scaling 149½ pounds.

"Even if Siegal were champion, he would not be a card as he has engaged in many poor fights since he won from Kloby. Doyle has never taken part in an unsatisfactory exhibition."

Robert W. Chambers' Famous Story THE STREETS OF ASCALON Illustrated by Charles Dana Gibson

The Story of a Beautiful Girl and the Man for Whom She Made a Great Sacrifice

WHAT HAS HAPPENED.

Dick Quarren, society idler and spendthrift but clever and good looking, has fallen desperately in love with Strelsa Leeds. She has had one unfortunate matrimonial experience, and since her advent into New York high society has admirers by the score. Quarren meets her first at a masked ball given by Molly Wycherly, wins an hour out of her life on a wager and refrains from kissing her, as he tells her he is eager to do. He wins her interest, and obtains permission to call at her home. She tells him there can be nothing serious between them, but she asks him to always think well of her. She bids him good by for two weeks. Upon her return she takes tea with Mrs. Sprowl, who urges her to marry Sir Charles Mallison. She invites Quarren to dine with her alone. She tells him she is not the same woman she was when she went South. He kisses her and awakens her love. She refuses to see him for a month, and a letter he writes is unanswered. Then he meets her at a charity bazaar. Mrs. Sprowl lectures him for dropping out of society. Quarren's bad business deals almost ruin him. Dankmere considers selling some of his old masters, and offers Quarren a partnership in the business which he accepts. Strelsa writes to Quarren for the first time in two months.

FORTUNATE the man whose means of livelihood is also his pleasure! Deep in his heart lies the unconscious contentment of certainty.

To learn what his wares really were seemed [illegible] appreciate and appraise each one [illegible] certain of what he dealt in.

Then too, his mind had long since invaded a future which d[illegible] suggestions. He himself would learn the practical manual art of restoration—learn how to clean, reline, revarnish, how to identify, how to d[illegible] an ancient canvas should tell him a true story, every grain in an old panel. He would be chief surgeon in his hospital for old and [illegible] masterpieces, he would [illegible] with his own hands clear the opacity from time dimmed beauty with savant touch, knit up tenderly the wound of ages——

"Dankmore," he said, throwing away his cigarette, "I'm going into this business from this minute, and I would like to die in harness, [illegible] geon and friend of old-time pictures. Do you think I can make a living at it?"

"God knows. Do you mean that you're really keen on it?"

"Dead keen."

Dankmere puffed on his cigar. "A chap usually makes out pretty well when he's a bit keen on anything of sorts. You'll be owning the gallery next, you infernal Yankee!"

Quarren laughed. "I won't forget that you gave me my first chance in the world. You've done it too, do you realize it, Dankmere?"

"Very glad, I'm sure."

"So am I!" said Quarren with sudden emphasis. "I believe I'm on the right track now. I believe it's in me—in my heart—to work—to work"—he laughed—"as the old [illegible] kind [illegible] grateful to you, do you understand?"

"Awful glad old chap."

"You funny Englishman. I be[illegible] make this thing go. Down comes my real estate sign. I'm part of the Dankmere Galleries now. I[illegible] rent the basement [illegible] sale and there you [illegible] and tinker a [illegible] any poor old dere[illegible] back to its pristin[illegible] I'm good [illegible]

The Letter

"Don't you care for pictures?" [illegible] kennel, my la[illegible] vaudeville." A[illegible] little leg over [illegible] he was attempting to [illegible]. He possessed a [illegible] piano whistle [illegible] taking [illegible] the [illegible]

Left alone, Quarren leaned back in his chair, resting [illegible] against [illegible]

He had [illegible] to do [illegible] there [illegible]

"Come up to W[illegible] now to-[illegible]"

[illegible] with Valasco to index [illegible] as possible, and [illegible] French and Italian p[illegible] he made an arrangement with Van Boschoven for [illegible] for the English, and warned Dankmere not to bother or interfere with these temperamental and irascible gentlemen while in exercise of their professional duties.

"Don't whistle, don't do abrupt skirt dances, don't sing comic songs, don't obscure the air with cigar smoke, don't go to sleep on [illegible] goes——"

"My God!" faltered his lordship, "do you mind if I breathe now and then?"

"[illegible] away a few days—Val[illegible]ance is slow and the others take their time. Let anybody come in who wants to, but don't sell anything until the experts report to me in writing"——

"Suppose some chap rushes in with ten thousand"——

"No."

"W[illegible]"

"Certainly not. Chaps who rush in with any serious money at all will rush in again all the faster if you make them wait. Don't sell a picture—not even to Valasco or any of the experts."

"Suppose a charming lady——"

"Now, [illegible] understand, I do [illegible] man who saw the picture painted [illegible] word."

"But my dear Quarren," protested Dankmere, seriously bewildered, [illegible] two hundred years ago paint any [illegible]"

"[illegible]," said Quarren solemnly, "the point is keenly taken. Ergo there are no real experts, only guessers. When Valasco et al finish their guessing I'll guess how near they have guessed correctly. Good by [illegible]. You'll be good, won't you, Dankmere?"

"No fear. I'll keep my weather eye on the shop. Do you want me to sleep here?"

"You'd better, I think. But don't have rowdy parties here, will you? and don't wander away and leave the door open. By George, I believe I'd better stay."

"[illegible] Go on and take your vacation, old chap. Back in a week?"

[illegible]

"[illegible] I'll have a jolly time by myself."

"Don't have too many men here [illegible]. The smoke will get [illegible] new curtains."

[illegible] stretched on the divan, laughed and blew a cloud of smoke at the ceiling. Then, reaching forth he took a palm leaf fan in one hand and a tall frosty glass in the other, and applied both in a manner from which he could extract the most benefit.

The Little Earl of Dankmere Appeals to Quarren on Where to Hang a Family Heirloom

Seeks Heiress

"Bon voyage!" he nodded to Quarren. "My duties and compliments and all that—and pick me out an heiress of sorts—there's a good fellow"——

As Quarren went out he heard his lordship burst forth into his distressing whistle, and he left him searching piercingly for inspiration

A Spirited and Swiftly Moving Romance of Hearts and High Society, by the Greatest Living Master of Fiction to complete his "Coster's Hornpipe."

In the train Quarren bought the evening papers, and the first item that met his eyes was a front-page column devoted to the Dankmere galleries. Every paper had broken out into glaring scare-heads announcing the recent despoiling of Dankmere Farns and the venture into trade of Algernon Cecil Clarence Farns, tenth Earl of Dankmere. The majority of papers were facetious, one or two scathing, but the more respectable journals managed to repress a part of their characteristic antagonism and report the matter with a minimum of venom and a rather exhaustive historical accompaniment.

"POOR PEER EAGER TO SELL HEIRLOOMS

"LORD DANKMERE'S CASE SAID TO BE ONE OF DOZENS AMONG THE BRITISH ARISTOCRACY

"GAMBLING SPIRIT BLAMED

"OBSERVERS ASCRIBE POVERTY OF OLD BRITISH FAMILIES TO THIS CAUSE MANY RENT ROLLS DECLARED TO BE MORTGAGED

"The opening of the so-called Dankmere Galleries, on Lexington avenue, will bring into the limelight once more a sprightly though somewhat world-battered little peer recently and disastrously connected with the stage and its feminine adjuncts.

"The Dankmere Galleries blossom in a shabby old house flanked on one side by a chop-suey restaurant haunted of celestials, and on the other by an undertaker's establishment displaying the following enterprising sign: Mortem's Popular $50 Funerals! Bury Your Family at Attractive Prices!

GAMBLING DID IT!

"Gambling usually lands the British peer on his aristocratic uppers. But in this case gamboling behind the footlights is responsible for the present display of the Dankmere family pictures in the converted real estate office of young Mr. Quarren of cotillion fame.

Among supposedly well-to-do English nobles the need for ready cash so frequently reaches the acute stage that all manner of schemes are readily resorted to in an effort to 'raise the wind.'

Sale of Treasures.

"Lord Dankmere openly admits that had he [illegible] any valuable 'junk' [illegible] in the attics of his mansion he would without hesitation have converted it into ready money long before this.

"Lord Dankmere's case is only one typical of dozens of others among the ex[illegible] and highly placed of Mayfair. It is a known fact that since the sale of the Capri Madonna [illegible] for [illegible] to the British Government [illegible] special act of Parliament [illegible] has gradually [illegible] of all treasures not [illegible] of the estate. [illegible] sum ($350,000) the late [illegible] of R[illegible] disposed of his famous library and the sale of the library was known to be necessary for the provision of [illegible] for the in[illegible]coming [illegible] the Duke of [illegible] reputed to be a man of vast wealth, had difficulty with a [illegible] the sale of some of his treasures.

"Such cases may be justified by circumstances. The general public hears, however, of only a few isolated cases. The number of private deals that are executed week in week out between impoverished members of the highest nobility, some of them bound like Lord B[illegible] and the Duke of [illegible], by close official ties to the court, and the agents of either new-rich Britishers or wealthy Americans has reached its maximum, and by degrees unentailed treasures and heirlooms are passing from owners of many centuries to families that were unheard of a dozen years ago.

She waited until after a comfortable dinner in the little apart[illegible]ment before broaching the subject that must be settled.

"That would be pleasant," Helen remarked absent mindedly.

She was wondering why Elizabeth had blushed at the suggestion.

"You would like that, wouldn't you," she asked.

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

The way a great many concerns, including not a few very large ones, are acting does not tend to inspire confidence that business will become brisk and cheerful this Fall. These concerns are taking steps calculated to bring about the very thing they don't want to see brought about. They are all eager and anxious for early revival and for the restoration of confidence. But they themselves are not acting on the assumption that there will be an early revival, but are acting in a way that tends to destroy confidence.

* * *

Straws can show how the wind blows. The number of companies and firms that have notified publishers of their decision not to use this Fall advertising space which had been contracted for, is disconcerting and ominous. Cancellation of Summer advertising schedules was indulged in hastily when the panic spirit swept over the business world months ago. Now, however, cancellation of Fall's schedules is being deliberately perpetrated.

* * *

Selling forces are also being allowed to disintegrate. Manifestly many executives are showing the white feather. They have lost courage entirely. They are not even getting their organizations into shape for handling active business in the Fall.

* * *

Now, let enough executives, let enough croporations, let enough companies, let enough firms, adopt this depressing policy, and depression we shall have. If we invite it, it will come. This actual incident well illustrates present-day conditions. A golf novice was taken out for a game by two good players. When they came to a place where the ball had to be driven over a pond to reach the hole, the novice noticed that first one and then the other good player dipped into his bag for an old ball, one that would float. The first player drove straight into the pond. So did the second. The novice took out a brand new ball, not a floater, teed up, swung vigorously, and the ball easily cleared the pond. "They prepared for failure. I prepared for success. And each of us got what he prepared for."

* * *

In this column repeated examples have been given of concerns that have gone out with redoubled determination to do a large volume of business and have succeeded beyond all expectations. They went after success and got it. Many others—most others—have supinely concluded that it was useless to try to push business, and they, too, have had their expectations more than fulfilled.

* * *

Here's another true story which should prove profitable to many business men at this stage. Chairman Lasker of the U. S. Shipping Board, one of the most noted advertising experts in America, issued instructions to suspend advertising of the sailings of certain passenger ships until thorough investigation of the results could be conducted. "The ink on this order," it is recorded, "was hardly dry before a telegram was received from the United States Mail Steamship Company, stating that it had just booked passage for 250 members of the American Legion, as a result of the Shipping Board's advertising. The Legion officers had planned to take passage on a French liner, but the opportunity of sailing under the American flag was brought to their attention through the Shipping Board's advertising. As a result, the United States Mail Steamship Company will receive practically $65,000 and it comes from a single advertisement."

* * *

Any fool was able to make money in business during the war boom, when everything kept soaring and soaring in price. The market value of goods increased practically daily. Sellers didn't have to spend a dollar or an hour in finding buyers.

Today it is different. The fools have gone and are going to the wall. It takes skill, experience, and backbone to operate a business successfully during these mettle-testing days. Those who have allowed cowardice to take possession of them are steadily going behind, and if they manage to survive until the turn comes, they will find themselves left badly in the lurch.

* * *

Virtually every element which goes to make up prosperity is either already with us or is on the way: every element except one. Without this element prosperity will not develop. Instead, we would invite very much worse times than those we have already passed.

* * *

This all-essential element is COURAGE.

General Electric's Orders

There has been a big decrease in new business for the General Electric Company this year, its booking having been at an annual rate approximating $190,000,000, or about 55 per cent of the high record total of $318,000,000 attained in 1920. The Lynn plant is operating at but 50 per cent. of capacity, now having but 8,000 persons on its payrol. It normally employs from 11,000 to 12,000.

Copper Production in 1920

Copper production in this country last year is reported by the Geological Survey to have totaled 1,209,000,000 pounds, a decrease of 6 per cent. from 1919. The value of its output is figured at $222,467,000 against $239,234,000 for 1919. Apparent consumption of refined new copper in the United States last year was 1,054,000,000 pounds. In 1919 it was 814,000,000.

RAILS ADVANCE AND STEELS DECLINE

Mexican Petroleum Shows a Small Gain at Noon; Market Is Quiet

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were heavy in New York at noon, the majority showing losses. Rails were a strong group, while steels were off as a class. Mexican Petroleum was up a fraction at the end of the forenoon after showing a point and a half gain and a point and a quarter loss still earlier. The improvement for rails came in the second hour.

Trading was quiet, first hour transactions approximating 135,000 shares. Call money opened at 6 per cent. Foreign exchange rates were down, demand sterling opening more than a cent lower at $3.63 3-8.

Among strongest stocks were U. S. Rubber, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Reading and International Paper. Weak ones included Royal Dutch, General Electric, Cosden, Sumatra, Atlantic Gulf and steel leaders.

EARLY TREND DOWNWARD.

The price movement was mixed at the start, with most active issues off and the tendency downward. The market became weak within a few minutes. Oils began with gains, but succumbed under general selling. Short covering was a negligible influence at the outset. The technical disadvantage into which bears had sold themselves has been rectified to a considerable extent. Motors and steels were especially weak. Chandler selling at a record low price, and U. S. Steel receding more than a point, as did Crucible and Bethlehem B. Rails eased off, tobaccos were firm, and sugars went down, American Sugar showing a two-point loss within a few minutes. But fluctuations averaged small. At the end of an hour there had been a slight rally, and prices were above the lowest level of that period.

GOVERNMENT FINANCING.

The higher call rate this week is due to preparations for mid-month financial operations by the U. S. Treasury. The government will withdraw $66,000,000 from New York banks tomorrow, when $60,000,000 certificates of indebtedness become due in that district. The total of the country's maturities of that kind on July 15 is about $132,000,000. On Tuesday last government withdrawals in New York totaled $18,300,000, making the week's aggregate in that centre of $84,300,000. So far in Boston this week's withdrawals amount to $2,650,000, and tomorrow they will foot up to $9,600,000, or a total of $12,250,000. Later in the month there will be a westward movement of money because of crop handling requirements. In regard to the agricultural situation, hot weather has deteriorated wheat, but has benefited corn.

Crop moving should occasion no strain. In general the money situation is the easiest known in many months. Business depression has reduced commercial and industrial demands and the conservative attitude in regard to loans has enlarged the cash resources both of the national treasury and banking institutions.

American Sugar Financing

In some quarters it is believed that the American Sugar Refining Co. must soon do some financing owing to the depressed condition of the sugar trade. It earned but little in the second quarter of this year, and while it has reduced its bank loans, it had to sell Liberty Bonds aggregating $14,371,999 to do it. Its recent investments in Cuba will amount to from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000, and its new Baltimore refinery may cost as much as $14,000,000.

Gain in Gold Holdings

During the year ended with June this country gained $535,838,892 in gold holdings. While the stock increased $438,611,217 in first six months of 1921 there was a decrease from January 1, 1920, to January 1, 1921, of $2,879,879.

Wall Street Briefs

The initial New York Curb bid for common stock of Mengel & Co. was $60 a share and no stock was offered. At this price the coming distribution will be equal to $2.85 a share on American Tobacco.

The Pittsburgh Oil & Gas Co. has deferred the 1½ cent dividend due at this time. This company is controlled by the Barnsdall Corporation.

Fred Mason and Walter H. Lite have been elected vice-presidents of the American Sugar Refining Co. Mr. Mason has been president of the Shredded Wheat Co. and Mr. Lite for many years was vice-president and general manager of the Beech Nut Packing Co.

The State of Michigan has sold $10,000,000 5¾ per cent. 20-year bonus bonds and $5,000,000 1-year 6 per cent. notes to a syndicate composed of First National Co., Detroit, Detroit Trust Co., Bankers Trust Co., of New York, Guaranty Co., National City Co. and Harris, Forbes & Co. The premium was $46,000.

The steamship Mauretania arrived in New York from Liverpool yesterday with $3,500,000 in gold.

According to private wire reports Royal Dutch will purchase Union Oil control.

June building permits in 155 cities aggregated $140,753,849 against $138,763,205 for permits in the same cities in May, it is reported by Bradstreet's.

It is stated that the American Beet Sugar Co. has sold practically all its carryover which amounted to about 524,000 bags on March 31, and is now out of the market.

Corporation Reports

For May the Western Union reports decreases of $1,284,504 in operating revenue and of $264,869 in operating income. Decreases for five months were $5,810,451 and $2,329,113 respectively.

At the end of 1920 International Harvester had working capital approximating $158,000,000. But its inventories had increased $31,500,000 in a year.

For the second quarter of this year Loft, Inc., reports that sales decreased $239,262, while for six months the decrease was $237,043.

The Lackawanna Steel Company reports for the June quarter operating loss of $384,762 compared with net earnings of $2,786,107 in corresponding 1920 quarter. After depreciation and charges there was a deficit of $983,127 against a balance of $1,881,946 a year ago.

The Vulcan Detinning Company reports for the March quarter of this year a deficit after charges and taxes $69,269, against net of $16,121 for the like period of 1920.

Town and City Loans

Peabody, Mass., has sold a temporary loan of $100,000, dated July 13 and maturing June 15, 1922, to Estabrook & Co., at 5.63 per cent. discount, plus $1.25 premium.

Nashua, N. H., will receive proposals until 10 a. m., July 18, for a temporary loan in anticipation of taxes of $80,000, dated July 29 and maturing December 22, 1921.

Melrose, Mass., will receive proposals until noon, July 14, for purchase at discount of a temporary loan of $50,000, maturing March 15, 1922.

Sugar Crop of Cuba

Sugar production in Cuba so far this season is estimated at 3,502,500 tons, as compared with 3,363,985 tons last year. The total annual consumption of the United States is about 4,000,000 tons, so that the Cuban crop alone, without including Porto Rico and the domestic beet crop, is almost sufficient to meet its requirements for twelve months.

HARDING SHOWS NATION'S HUGE DEBT SHADOW

Public Should Digest and Profit by President's Bunch of Figures, Says Evans

By C. B. EVANS

Chicago, July 14.—If you will kindly suspend conversation about the weather and thrust your arm into the bag full of statistics the President handed to Congress and the country Tuesday, you will oblige those commentators who have been talking so freely on unfavorable economic conditions.

The President showed a grasp of the subject such as is rarely demonstrated by a chief executive. He reminds one of Gladstone, who used to stand up for hours in the House of Commons talking on such subjects and showing that he knew more about them than the Chancellor of the Exchequer himself. One can hear at this point some old croaker remarking "Humph, a clerk compiled all these figures for him," and it is true that Mr. Gladstone in one of these four-hour performances did stop and ask "Where am I at," but both he and Mr. Harding have made it manifest that a statesman with a broad view can be of enormous benefit to his kind, compared with the young man who is perfect in figures, perhaps can add five or six columns at a time.

HUGE SHADOW OF DEBT.

Mr. Harding's portrayal is an overwhelming argument in favor of the position he took, but also it shows the huge shadow of debt and debt complications that overhang the United States. One does not like such a shadow even in these days of excessive sunlight.

It is a query among the friends of Charles G. Dawes in this city how much he will be able to do in reducing the expenses of the government in his management of the budget scheme.

It is reduction of expenses that we need rather than the discovery of new ways of spending money. More and more it is seen that enterprise is blocked by the huge tax percentages running against persons of large income. Seemingly capital has no channel except that which runs to the United States Treasury and that stream does not operate the wheels of industry.

This very week the treasury must withdraw from the banks something like $66,000,000 to meet obligations. It is a comfort to observers of General Dawes' work that he is an extremely able politician and knows how to meet politicians and self-seekers who are not politicians on their own ground.

SEE THE BIG THING.

We are in the habit of looking all sorts of ways for opportunities to stop outgo and increase income, but somehow we do not see the biggest thing there is in this country, that is the United States government, which lives and moves in billions while the great corporations are contented with little millions and the rest of us taper off into dollars and cents. It is high time for us to see the big thing that is right in front of us.

Not everybody appreciates the intensity of the feeling among the heavy men in business with respect to such enterprise as characterized this country before the war. There is no such enterprise now, no creation, no entry into new lines, no outlook. The reason is that men commonly go into such things for gain, but the more the gain now the greater the percentage of tax on the capitalist. His avarice and ambition are extinguished.

Yet he sees a multitude of opportunities which under normal conditions would be fruitful of profit and of good to the community, which also would engage the services of many workers and distribute money among millions of people who are now idle or curtailed in their opportunities for work.

SHOULD DIGEST STATEMENT.

The President has spotted all these things in his address and emphasizes in one short paragraph the important matters of reduction in internal taxation, readjustment of war debt and adjustment of foreign loans.

Every American should digest what he has said and allow it to have its full effect on his own thinking. Moreover the nations of Europe will sense the main ideas in this speech and will bethink themselves possibly of some method of paying up what they owe us. They are tarred with the same stick as Americans in one way, that is, they think that the resources of this country are limitless.

We might set them an example by knowing something about ourselves appreciating one of the greatest burdens now on business and not the constantly gazing abroad to see what we may get out of the rest of the world while hugging ourselves because of some trivial revivals in trade here and there.

TRADING TORPID ON BOSTON EXCHANGE

No Definite Trend Developed During the Morning; No Animation on Curb

Prices moved irregularly on the Boston Exchange at the opening and all the morning, but a majority of the few active issues were lower. Trading was torpid and without feature. Dealings in American Telephone and rights constituted a large part of the trading. This corporation reports as to earnings $1,072,814 decrease in balance for the six months ending June 30, but President Thayer says there is a safe margin above dividends, aside from profits from associated companies. Amoskeag advanced 2⅜ and New England Telephone one. United Fruit lost part of a point gain. Point losses were shown by Waltham Watch, Ahmeek and Woolen common. McElwain first preferred recovered a point loss.

CURB MARKET IRREGULAR.

The Curb market had an uncertain trend and was dull and narrow. Leaders were Boston & Montana and Eureka.

At the end of an hour the majority of active issues were off and losses included Mutual 1 cent at 21 cents and Alpha 3 cents at 73 cents. Among gains were Boston & Montana 2 cents at 60 cents, Eureka 2 cents at 31 cents and Crystal 1 cent at 33 cents. Verde Mines had lost an opening gain of a cent.

BIG DECREASE SHOWN IN REVENUE FREIGHT

Washington, July 14.—A total of 774,808 cars were loaded with revenue freight during the week ended July 2, it was announced by the Association of Railway Executives. Compared with the preceding week, there was an increase in the loadings of grain and grain products, coal, ore, merchandise and miscellaneous freight. There were heavy decreases, however, in live stock, coke and forest products.

WALL STREET GOSSIP

By MONITOR

NEW YORK, July 14.—Stock transactions Wednesday showed a moderate increase in volume, but there was no change from the dullness and irregularity that has characterized recent sessions. Professional traders were inclined to take the selling side, and were found hammering away at certain issues supposed to be in a vulnerable position. The steels were inclined to heaviness, although they rallied comfortably in the last hour, with Steel Common closing around the best level of the day at a fractional advance. The selling movement was inspired by the poor showing of the Lackawanna report for the second quarter of the year.

THE talent also seemed inclined to operate on the short side of the rails, basing their tactics on the theory that this group had been a favorite with the public and therefore might be presumed to contain a long interest of questionable strength.

EARLY in the day American Tobacco made an upward spurt as a result of the declaration of 4¾ per cent., payable in the stock of one of the company's subsidiaries. Mexican petroleum also ran up sharply, and closed at a net gain of more than 7 points on covering by the short interest which was forced by some of the local traders.

JUST at present the market is devoid of any decisive trend and moreover it is responsive to no special influence of fundamental character. The weekly review of the Iron Age fails to bring much comfort to those who are following the fortunes of the steel shares, as it states that the announcement of lower prices has been followed by less rather than more buying and that purchases are awaiting the effect of labor and freight adjustments.

THE monotony of Wednesday's trading on the Stock Exchange was broken only by a few movements in special issues. These came through news developments affecting them specifically. The general list was lethargic throughout the day.

AMERICAN TOBACCO was a conspicuous feature of strength on the declaration of a dividend of 4¾ per cent. on both the common and preferred B stocks, payable in common stock of the Mengel Company, Inc., at par. This stock has been held in the treasury of the American Tobacco Company, but under the terms of new contracts entered into between the tobacco manufacturers and the Mengel Company, its distribution was made necessary.

AT the directors' meeting today the American Tobacco Company called for redemption August 15, $3,333,000 of serial notes due November 1, this year. The company reports cash on hand of $10,000,000 and outstanding notes of December 31, of approximately $13,300,000. Bank loans which stood at $10,000,000 December 31, have all been paid, a statement said. The book value of the Mengel Company stock as of April 30 is $110.34. American Tobacco advanced nearly three points on the announcement.

THE Steel stocks were heavy most of the session. Selling followed the publication of the Lackawanna Steel Company's report for the second quarter. This showed a deficit after charges and taxes of $983,127 as compared with a profit in the corresponding quarter last year, of $8,725, equal to two cents per share, and of $1,881,946, or $5.36 per share during the same quarter of 1920.

THERE is an undercurrent of disappointment among New York bankers in the demands which now are making their appearance here for funds for crop moving purposes in the West. It had been the general impression that the Middle West financial institutions had become sufficiently strong to take care of these demands with but little aid from the East. This week there have been calls for unexpectedly large sums for this purpose, it is said. Tomorrow government withdrawals from the local district will total $66,000,000. The fear of a substantial increase in call money rates played its part in restricting trading operations.

THE Mexican situation, Wall Street believes, is going to occupy a large part of the attention of the public during the next few weeks. Involved in this perplexity is the result of the disarmament conference which President Harding suggested, and to which the nations concerned have given their hearty accord. This situation develops through the known desire of European nations for either a settlement of the obligations of Mexico, or the abrogation of the Monroe Doctrine. There is much going on under the surface with which bankers here are vaguely familiar and about which they cannot speak. The effect of any action which may be taken on American investments in Mexico is a new problem for traders to speculate upon.

SEVERAL weeks ago it was reported that there was liquidation of an important character going on in General Electric. Traders sold the stocks short and were promptly run in. Following that the price has sagged steadily until Wednesday, when it reached a new low for the movement under 122, and a loss of nearly four points on the day.

THE $15,000,000 of soldiers' bonus bonds authorized by the State of Michigan have been taken by a syndicate of New York and Detroit bankers, it was announced. Of these bonds $10,000,000 are 5¾ per cent. twenty-year securities and the remainder one-year six per cent. notes. The syndicate paid the state a premium of $46,000.

GOLD arrivals Wednesday included 1,110,000 pounds from London, and a small shipment of bars from Colombia, valued at about $25,000. The Olympic brought 238,000 pounds.

:-: HAPPENINGS IN THE WORLD OF MOTION PICTURES :-:

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

ANOTHER foreign production is about to invade our shores, but this time it is not a film of Teuton handiwork, but Herbert Brenon's production of Rider Haggard's story of the Welch Powell, Deal to Terry. coast, "Beatrice," which Mr. Brenon filmed for the Unione Cinematografica Italian de Roma in the picturesque Italian city, Tarmone.

Marie Doro, an American star who has been spending the past few years abroad, is the only other American besides Mr. Brenon connected with the picture. She is seen, of course, in the title role. Goldwyn has acquired the American rights to this film, which will be released here in the Fall. The London critics were lavish in their praise of the film when it was given a showing there last Summer.

"THREE MUSKETEERS" COMING

AUGUST 14 is the date set for the opening of the new Douglas Fairbanks picture, "The Three Musketeers." It will be shown in New York on that date to be released in the larger cities of the East immediately after.

This will be the most pretentious of the Fairbanks films yet made. Following the example of D. W. Griffith with his pictures, Rex Ingram with "The Conquering Power," Cecil DeMille and William DeMille with their films, "Doug" is making "The Three Musketeers" mostly Douglas Fairbanks. Alexander Dumas, who wrote the original story, Edward Knoblock, who adapted it to the screen, and Fred Niblo, who directed it, are "among those present" and are given casual mention. As for the rest it's purely "Doug."

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

MARGUERITE DE LA MOTTE plays the leading role opposite the strenuous star, while Barbara La Marr is seen in a "heavy" role. Mary MacLaren, an erstwhile star, will be seen as the Queen. Nigel De Bruller, whose performance of Tchernoff in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," is one of the most understanding ones we have seen, will be seen in the role of the Cardinal. There are over 135 players in the company.

A WHISPER FROM OVERSEAS.

WITH THE discussion over the Paramount production of Barrie's "Peter Pan" occupying much of the time and attention of the powers that be of that company, comes a pertinent question from London.

"Shall we produce the picture in America or in London?" the directors and producers ask one another. "Why not Kensington Gardens?" suggests a Londoer.

SOMETHING NEW FOR NEILAN.

THERE is no producer or movie enthusiast today who is not on a continual still hunt for "something new, something entirely different." Marshall Neilan is no exception to this rule.

Mr. Neilan has been working on a theory for some months and feels that he is now in a position to put it before the public. His idea is shown in "Bits of Life," the newest Neilan production, which was finished last week. In this film he gives four complete episodes, each having relation to the general theme, but each taken from a story by a different author. It is expected that in the manner that Mr. Neilan handles the theory, it will show definite originality.

WALLACE REID LEAVES.

WALLACE REID, who has kept feminine hearts upset in New York since he came East to play in "Peter Ibbetson," has finished his role in that piece and is leaving for Hollywood within the next few days.

Elliott Dexter, another Paramount player, is still in New York, but plans to return West very shortly to play a prominent role in the next Cecil De Mille feature with Gloria Swanson and Reid. "Rainbow's End" is the name of the picture. Miss Swanson is putting the finishing touches on her second starring feature, "Under the Lash," an adaptation of the stage play and novel, "The Shulamite." Mahlon Hamilton plays the leading role opposite her.

LILLIAN GISH IN DALY CO.

LILLIAN GISH

LILLIAN GISH is definitely going into the "legitimate" drama in the Fall. She will be a member of Arnold Daly's company in his contemplated repertoire at the Greenwich Village Theatre down in the picturesque quarter of New York.

They will give a series of the well-known stage successes by famous playwrights, among them "Candida" by George Bernard Shaw.

NORMAN TREVOR DRAGGED BACK.

AS HE WAS about to leave to catch an English-bound steamer for a vacation in his native country before again taking up his part of the husband in Gilda Varesi's stage production, "Enter Madame," Norman Trevor was button-holed by Hugo Ballin, the producer, and was persuaded to stay here and play the lead in the next Ballin feature, "Jane Eyre," featuring Mabel Ballin.

Trevor was hard to convince, as he thought of long days in the hot studio and then of short days on the golf courses of England, but Mr. Ballin's persuasive powers are strong. The actor cast a longing and apologetic look at his golf clubs and signed the contract.

CAMERA CLICKS.

JUNE MATHIS, the continuity writer for Metro, has thought over her decision to leave the motion picture field for the musical comedy stage, her first love, and, with the privilege of her sex, has changed her mind. Metro needs her and she'll write more continuities like "The Four Horsemen" and "The Conquering Power."

ROSCOE "FATTY" ARBUCKLE goes soon to Chicago where his company will start work on a new picture, "Via Fast Freight." Scenes will be taken in the big Chicago department stores and freight yards.

CORINNE GRIFFITH has returned to New York from Virginia Hot Springs, where she has been resting since she completed work on her next Vitagraph picture, "Moral Fibre." She will start on a new production immediately and will be directed by her husband, Webster Campbell.

Hot Summer Sun Trying On the Complexion

How to Protect Your Skin and Bring Roses to Your Cheeks

A Free Oatmeal Prescription Does Its Work Overnight. You Can Prepare It at Home.

New York—Exposure to sun, dust and wind has a very bad effect upon the skin and complexion. There is a way to overcome this. "It is my own discovery and takes just one night to get such marvelous results," says Mae Edna Wilder when her friends ask her about her wonderful complexion and the improved appearance of her hands and arms. "You can do the same thing, if you follow my advice," she says. "I feel it my duty to tell every girl and woman what this wonderful prescription did for me. Just think of it. All this change in a single night. I never tire of telling others just what brought about such remarkable results. Here is the identical formula that removed every defect from my face, neck, hands and arms. Until you try it you form no idea of the marvelous change it will make in just one application. The prescription, which you can prepare at your own home, is as follows:

"Go to any grocery store and get ten cents' worth of ordinary oatmeal and from any department or drug store a bottle of Derwillo. Prepare the oatmeal as directed in every package of Derwillo. Before applying Derwillo cleanse the skin thoroughly with a good cleansing cream. (Liska cold cream I have found to be the best.) The first application will astonish you. It makes the skin appear transparent, smooth and velvety. I especially recommend this method for dark, sallow skin, shiny nose, freckles, tan, sun spots, coarse pores, rough skin, ruddiness, wrinkles, and, in fact, every blemish the face, hands and arms are heir to. If your neck or chest is discolored from exposure, apply this combination there and the objectionable defect will disappear as if by magic. It is absolutely harmless and will not produce or stimulate a growth of hair. Since short sleeves are in vogue it is necessary to have beautiful hands and arms and no matter how rough and ungainly the hands and arms or what abuses they had had through hard work and exposure to sun and wind, this combination will work a wonderful transformation. Thousands who are using it report the same results I have had."

Miss O. C. says: "My complexion was poor and my skin rough. My neck, chest, hands and arms were dark from exposure. The very first application of this wonderful Derwillo-oatmeal combination convinced me that my poor complexion and skin blemishes would soon be a thing of the past. In a few weeks all these unsightly defects had entirely disappeared and I shall always use it to keep my complexion at its best all the time. I have recommended it to my girl friends and they are just as enthusiastic over it as I am. We all use it before going to the theater, dances or parties and it's wonderful what a difference it makes in our appearance."

Mrs. G. V. writes: "Oatmeal and Derwillo have worked miracles with my complexion. I had many despised wrinkles and a sallow, rough skin. My hands and arms were covered with freckles. After eight weeks' use of Mae Edna Wilder's wonderful complexion prescription these objectionable defects have entirely vanished. I look ten years younger, and advise every girl and woman to try it and feel confident after one or two applications they will use it continually and be just as favorably impressed with it as I am. I recommend it to all of my friends."

NOTE—To get the best effect be sure to follow the complete directions contained in every package of Derwillo, and it is so simple that any one can use it, and so inexpensive that any girl or woman can afford it. Department stores and druggists guarantee that there will be noticeable improvement after the first application or they will refund the money. It is sold in this city at all toilet counters under a money refund guarantee.—Advertisement.

The "Disarmament Talk"

And Other Things That Are YOUR Business

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

The President will talk with France, England, Italy and Japan about disarmament and especially about the Far Eastern problem. France is not much interested. She will be glad enough to cut down navy expense, but thinks she needs 800,000 men to watch Germany while Germany works out her penalty.

The army will cost about what France will get from Germany. It will keep 800,000 Frenchmen away from their homes.

A million Germans that WOULD have been in the army will be at home, manufacturing goods for sale and also children. When the thing is over, there will be a hundred million Germans, thoroughly trained by twenty years' of industrial semi-slavery, and 35,000,000 French people. What then?

It is the "Far Eastern" problem that interests England and this country. ASIA is the problem. The British Empire, a great international department store, doing business all over the earth, is anxious everywhere, and open everywhere to attack.

Americans reading about the English-Japanese treaty should understand, of course, that, so far as England is concerned, there is in the treaty no actual, present, PLANNED hostility to the United States. The British "own" India, with 300,000,000 of people, and other vast Asiatic territories. They want the friendship of Japan because Japan is the only ACTIVE force in Asia, the only country that might really "start something" dangerous to the British Empire.

As for Japan's attitude, this country ought to have a good explanation of the work that Japan is now doing, fortifying islands in the Pacific that could be used only as bases for attack upon us.

Until the Japanese explanation is complete and satisfactory it will be well for this country to continue manufacturing the 6,000-pound aerial bombs, three times as big as any hitherto constructed, containing more than two-thirds of their weight in TNT. Such a bomb dropping from a flying machine would compel earnest Japanese attention, such as kind words would not command.

Our government should occasionally be reminded of the fact that it ought to specialize in making inflammable bombs to spread fire as widely as possible. We want peace with Japan, have no possible reason for wanting anything else. But we want the right to control our own territory, which Japan questions.

We should always have in mind that Japan is a nation built largely of paper, and bamboo, and that a flock of flying machines setting sail from Guam with combustible bombs would be the most powerful pacifist argument that Japan would readily understand.

It is suggested that Bulgaria and Serbia will unite with Kemal Pasha to fight Greece. Italy and some other European countries would look on complacently, being tired of Greek war activity. More than a big world war would be needed to stop fighting in the Balkans.

A forest fire stops for a moment the war between weasels and the rabbits, crows and the good birds. But it starts as soon as the fire dies out.

So with the world war and the human weasels and rabbits.

The Bolsheviki, it seems, forgetting human and Divine law, seize American patents, without paying the owners. Our State Department, agitated, may even consent to deal with Russia to the extent of saying, "Please don't steal our patents."

What, if anything, did the State Department do, at a time when patents belonging to Germans were being "bought," to put it politely, sold at public auction in this country? What was the exact difference between that buying and selling of property belonging to Germans and the plain frank stealing that the Bolsheviki are doing?

To auction off for sixty or seventy dollars a German patent worth millions, transferring the rights of a German owner to an American corporation, is presumably good patriotism. But if in Russia they steal your patent outright, that is Bolshevism. What is the moral difference?

While under bombardment from aeroplanes, the battleship Iowa was manoeuvred, steered, controlled, speeded up and slowed down by an officer on the battleship Ohio, five miles away. The control was by radio. Officers say that radio control of flying machines will come next.

Flying machines carrying dynamite, steered low over cities by flying ships up high enough to be safe from aircraft guns, will add to the unpleasantness of war. The real next step will be a transmission of power by wireless from the earth to flying machines. Then will come the 1,000-mile-an-hour machine, which is the goal.

As before suggested, look out for civil war in Ireland. You have read of it beginning, at Belfast, with fifteen killed and a hundred wounded. If Sinn Fein Ireland makes peace with England, the conditions will not suit the Protestant part of Ireland. When England and Sinn Fein stop fighting, that will not necessarily mean peace in Ireland.

The distinguished head of an important bank solemnly asks Congress why it hasn't cut down taxation, meaning especially, excess profits tax and big income tax. The answer might be, "While the country is spending five thousand millions a year and more, we must take the money from those that HAVE MONEY. We can't collect it in orphan asylums or homes for the aged poor."

GRADUATION DAYS are over, which simply means that the real problems of the graduates lie ahead. Mr. McCay, in this cartoon, points the only way to success. There is no short cut. The sharpening of intelligence on experience may find ways to cut down the work—or, rather, make it easier. But, fundamentally, the truth is that by service only can the honest citizen win bread.

Results to Date of Prohibition

"What Has Prohibition Actually Accomplished to Date?" asked William Randolph Hearst editorially in the Boston American of July 2. One hundred dollars will be paid for the best answer of not more than 150 words.

Emptied Jails

Editor Boston American:

Prohibition has decreased drunkenness, emptied many jails, and greatly reduced the pauper and the insane. Statistics prove this. Every reader knows individual cases.

John comes home sober to Mary on pay day, with his envelope intact. A milion Johns are thus coming home to their Marys. That's vital to the Nation. But prohibition's greatest accomplishment is that it has outlawed alcohol.

All laws are only partly enforced, but they define crime. Prohibition has made the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages a crime. Alcohol can no longer hide behind the law.

To license an evil is to compromise with it. Compromise is cowardly. To license the dealer and punish the drunkard is illogical. Prohibition makes the people honest with themselves—unafraid and unashamed.

OWNING A BUSINESS.

It is unfortunate if you are not fitted to run a business or if you are not financially prepared to enter business, but these facts should not make you feel that you are a failure and that there is little use of trying to be more than you are at present.

Occasionally, you have thought of it and realized that you do not exert yourself as much as you might in order to make yourself more proficient as an employe.

You have not cared much that you do not exert yourself, so disgusted to think you cannot run your own business; but if you should get to be an expert in your line you could command a salary in excess of the net income from many a small business, and you have not at stake every dollar you have in the world, as many a worried business man has today.

The Ghosts

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

THERE was no wind, and yet the air
Seemed suddenly astir;
There were no forms, and yet all space
Seemed thronged with growing hosts.
They came from Where and from Nowhere,
Like phantoms as they were.
They came from many a land and place—
The ghosts, the ghosts, the ghosts.

And some were white and some were gray
And some were red as blood—
Those ghosts of men who met their death
Upon the field of war.
Against the skies of fading day,
Like banks of clouds they stood;
And each wraith asked another wraith,
"What were we fighting for?"

One said, "I was my mother's all;
And she was old and blind."
Another, "Beckon earth, my wife
And week-old baby lie."
Another, "At the bugle's call,
I left my bride behind;
Love made so beautiful my life,
I could not bear to die."

In voices like the winds that moan
Among pine trees at night,
They whispered long, the newly dead,
While listening stars came out.
"We wonder if the cause is known,
And if the war was right
That killed us in our prime," they said,
"And what it was about."

They came in throngs that filled all space—
Those whispering phantom hosts.
They came from many a land and place—
The ghosts, the ghosts, the ghosts.

IS YOUR OWN HOUSE IN PERFECT ORDER?

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

IS your house in order? Are you ready to die?

A more important query—are you ready to live?

Among certain nations and according to some religious beliefs, an acceptance of fatality is habitual.

Such believers are fearless of death, holding that your end cannot come before your destined day, nor can you escape your doom when due.

We of the western world do not commonly think our way through, in this philosophic fashion. Therefore, we live rather happy-go-luckily, and we are likely to avoid the disagreeable task of relating death to ourselves—any sooner than we must.

For Life or Death

It is the unusual person who early puts his house in order, ready for death or for life.

Ready for death! That seems to suggest last wills and testaments and farewells!

Well! Why not? There is nothing necessarily painful about these operations.

We appear to take for granted that testaments are concerns for the wealthy and the aged; as though only the death of these could make a difference to their related survivors.

On the contrary, at any age (whether fifteen or fifty), and under whatever condition of poverty or affluence, you ought to put your house in order, anticipating the grim visitant, and formally devising your favorite book or your dog or your many millions, so that your property shall be owned and used as nearly as possible, according to your wish and will.

Obviously, too, one's inner house should be in order, so that one may be ready to die—and one's life seem complete, whatever the measure of years.

In a manner, we have reconciled ourselves to the three-score-years-and-ten span of human existence. Why not aspire to five-score?

It is not difficult to foresee and foretell a steady prolongation of normal life and activity, already indicated in our hosts of young old men.

But it is even more desirable that there shall be much earlier intellectual, moral and spiritual maturity; so that, if the visible end comes in the forties, the twenties, or even in the teens, death shall not seem such a tragedy, because life has been so obviously incomplete.

The truly lovely, the really successful life is not continued too long, nor can it be finished too early.

It is a thing of beauty, a joy forever; its loveliness increases; it will never pass into nothingness.

That type of life in youth suggests the serenity of age, and in maturity remains still childlike; just as Nature's seasons mutually borrow beauty, early Summer prophesying Autumn's opulence, and even late Winter retaining somewhat of the graces of the preceding Spring?

Nature's House

But Nature's house, you see, is always in order. A most methodical matron is she!

With generous allowance and proper reverence, one may say that, with her, nothing falls early or too late, but what succeeding seasons may repair.

Why should not we, her children, herein at least, emulate the Universal Mother? Life or death should not make so great a difference as they do. They are equally a part of the way of nature.

Our house should always be in order for either—ready for death, ready for life.

Confess—you do not like this theme!

If you find it gruesome, be sure that your house is not in order—for death or for life.

Otherwise, you may greet either aspect of the Unseen with a cheer!

The properly heroic soul is glad of life and unafraid of death. In such a soul there is always fullness of beauty—whether in childhood, youth, maturity or age, even as in Nature's bud, blossom, flower or fruit.

Youthful Strategy

The father of a large family one evening, when his three small daughters were having too much fun, jumping and playing on their bed, went to the bottom of the stairs and threatened to spank them if they did not become quiet. The girls remained quiet for a few minutes, then the fun broke out again. After this performance had been repeated several times the father went upstairs to carry out his promise. Without taking the trouble to light a lamp, the father administered two spankings and then went back downstairs. The next morning the eldest of the girls complained bitterly. "I don't see why you spanked me twice," she said. "I didn't," the father replied. "You did." "How could that happen?" "After you spanked me the first time Ethel flopped under the bed and came in at the front and you missed her altogether."

WITH PARTY IN ATTACK ON MOUNT EVEREST

By Col. Howard Drury,

TINGRI DZONG, June 23, via Simla, July 13.—From Kampa Dzong we started into an unknown country. We left Kampa Dzong on June 8.

Harold Raeburn unfortunately is seedy and unable to pick up strength in these altitudes, so we decided the best thing was to send him down to Lachen in Sikhim, where he could properly be looked after in the mission until he recovers strength and then later he could rejoin us.

Dr. A. F. R. Wollaston, Gyaltzen and Kazie accompanied him to Lachen. They will rejoin us as soon as they catch up, probably not before we reach Tingri Dzong.

The route from Kampa Dzong led across a great plain for sixteen miles to Lingga, the first halt on our way, where we had a clear but distant view of Mount Everest. To the south rose the snowy tops of the Himalayas, whose northern slopes as a rule rose much gentler than the southern faces. The ridges here were very troublesome, surrounding us in clouds. We were very grateful when the wind started.

Valley of the Yaru

We now are traveling down the valley of the Yaru, a tributary of the Arum, which passes through Nepal to the east of Mount Everest.

From Lingga we marched another 13 miles in clouds of midges across a plain sometimes sandy and sometimes marshy to Tinki Dzong, a picturesque old fort on the banks of a large pond which was swarming with bareheaded geese, gulls and brahminy ducks, all so tame they allowed us to approach within five yards, not attempting to move. The inhabitants flocked around us, as they never had seen a European before and were most interested.

The Jongpen of the district rode out to meet us with a few followers and then escorted us to where our camp was to be. Already he had pitched several tents for us. He had tea, and chang brewed from barley was ready. He was a most obliging and courteous host, presenting us afterwards with 200 eggs and four sheep.

Several prosperous villages and large monasteries are in the neighberhood. The valley is covered with barley fields, which, although grown in an altitude of more than 14,000 feet ripens perfectly. There also is quite a grove of willows belonging to a monastery. The following day we returned the Jongpen's call and were given tea and an excellent meal of macaroni seasoned with chilli sauce. This is eaten with chopsticks and was a somewhat difficult undertaking.

Usual Wrangling

On June 11 we left Tinki Dzong. There was the usual wrangling about loads before we started, as there were some 45 different families' supplies to be transported and the animals for transport only consisted of 86 animals, each person naturally wanted the lightest load. Eventually the headman took the garters from every family and mixed them all up. He then laid down the garters on various loads, and the persons to whom the garters belonged had to carry the load on his animals without further arguments.

The day's march led over the Tinki pass, 17,000 feet high, but quite easy, with fine views to the east. We descended again into the broad valley of the Yaru, which here is carpeted with gorse bushes and covered with yellow flowers. Our camp was pitched at Chusher Nango under a fine old ruined town looking toward Nila Pass, leading into Nepal.

Yaru Is Forded

Our start the following morning was delayed by the wildness of the animals forming the transport, and the plain soon was strewn with fallen loads, the yaks and bullocks careening madly in every direction. We had to ford the Yaru, which here is about 80 yards wide and three feet deep. After crossing a marshy plain we arrived at the home of our friend, Phari Jungpen. His brother, acting as agent for him, rode out to meet us and escorted us to his house.

It is a fine, solid, stone building, dominating all the smaller houses. Its walls' tops are covered with gorse and also juniper, giving it quite a festive appearance. Tents were pitched for us in a grass paddock close to a grove of willows. Indoors a meal of Tibetan dumplings with soup and chilli sauce was provided, together with tea, milk and beer. The allowance of dumplings was 15 per head and our digestions were unable to do full justice.
